a poem

In nerves within the borrowed and find , powder making liniments, distance covering difference, cut of the apostrophic line (entering with luck) confines and gambling nothing, always searches more.
Knowledge of the tilt, the simplifying lack is our known. And what else is?

Science fills and rules our life, science in which human beings step before us whole—an inner dream of planned and twisted courses. Loss of spectacle to an ordeal of sheer strength, a short life to sketch in preliminaries.

Spectacle's visionary circumstances tosses light out with the rain water, not an easy distance to trek when every instance grasps onto the way. I leak inside to out; I further my enemy's chances; I fumble with the momentary parentage, a paregoric lost in sight.

Peace animates spectators walking out this morning, no dry land in sight what hard labors put in place troubles the lowlands, oh yeah things bringing to perfection and no synthesis at night, but love gone out, our perfect man took leave of.

Before hours, ours counted more. Insert an ear of the unsustaining shiver, theoretic soil covering the humid loam, and what grows grows deep and proud. Pass the isolating chip, can you? This isn't a request... the walking ocean of buildings, the issuance of leaves.

Sinking heat among cicadas, dense alley here where four more hold the chair dampness. The dog's tail hangs low he is angry, he will bite.
Who are the students of time? Do they carry through risk alertness, insistent in gender?
Not to boast who yet hanker, you play all the instruments the open umbrella in the tree tops, rain read an edge of rust in internment village but I will make it to you dancing, groaning, familiar tune of utterance, entrance to pick a word, or to pick a listener pick a history. Today we play, tomorrow descends and exiles. The stories ask us what to do, to work and love the face, the hands, the eyes of benefiting uselessness, a clock to wrist.

Here we came, or what bears us listing to port, listening all the more clearly since moths beat against the wind, and nothing shields us.

Theaters collect seats, don 't they?
I read in the newspaper: museums and libraries are the calling cards of memory, though who can tell the index from catalogue from line.

What do I have in my tent?
An eyelid closed in black plastic flap, a notebook page, grass of torn ring binding a soft polyhedron of reflected shapes screens customer from memory.
To reach his room through back hallway's narrow stairs spiraling in the darkness he climbed at night, touching at every landing a button which briefly, dimly lit the stairway, not for long though, not long enough to reach the next floor.

Often he climbed in darkness always groped for the button blind along the curving sooty wall, and when finally he was home, in the small room with its single bulb, its mattress table and chair, colorless walls, single window, low ceiling, no water he was covered with black dust exhausted and drenched in tears collapsed on a floor where thirty years ago his father had lain silent listening for the voices of policemen in the hall.

Eventually he rose made his way around the hall to a cold water faucet, sink and toilet set into a wall, atop the building's waste stack.

From the dormer window, where he crouched on the crapper, a freezing night seemed to lead upward cylindrically, not to an exterior, neither past nor future world, but into dust, perhaps visible duets of stars — a visitor enduring their warrant of dim, distant light.

Each particle conducts it, a tour fulfilling momentary comfort promising eventual release. Trust will pay the bills, and memory accounts for agency and rest. Let's test it: in nineteen sixty-five the porch led into night, the oaks and bays clutching above the stream, invisibly pastoral (Bar-bar-bar, Bar-bar-barann...) made specific by the palace at my feet folding into and out of a location living where, in the flora (There was a fair maid dwellin') a long shadow of belief excited the shrubbery. Anthropomorphic, to be sure.

If anything was remembered, beneath the naked bulb, it would toss the greying sheets out like a preference for gore.
The day-to-day derives maxims, maximum displacement making room for a cup of soup, piece of bread.

Send a postcard from your location. Tell me exactly what happens when the moon derives its night-light, and the rock pushes up into frozen sheets of glass and steel. Stroke the warmth at your breast, hold the nub of flesh between your fingers, and return to me finally. But in what ways can these windings connect with thought? Beginning not as modern but as here, or so says my body leaning from this chair.

Embracing fiction, a functioning desire makes for strange and wonderful ceremony, like the salve of tongues and language in my ear regulating law and thought.

For this, I'd walk back and forth across the bridge, and descend to the island itself. I'd think of an edge, as if a prow once moored in self merged. Scrappy grass leans into sandy soil where flint rocks, sharp-edged pebbles also gleam. Seeing these useful stones, perhaps, a traveler once put down her basket and camped by the river, to pare its stone edge. In such mental frame once I walked from Burbank airport through North Hollywood and reached the studio gate, smoking, inverted. Fire trucks rush towards the wreck and pull him from bed. To investigate what circling the island I saw buildings, dark as rotting teeth, begin to lean on each other, and a cloud tore at the moon. I continued to feel such pain, solemn nodding, but could gain no authority from what was read. Instead suppose no escape were possible, only one's own father, stolid, refusing to see what was obvious to all that sleep would be — was! — fatal to longing. No shadows now reach the edifice of day.

Lacunae are in full swing, strong arguments which seem to transcribe it all, instruction, recitation.
I wonder, something is missing; we are tense or else just poised on a swell of memory.

The collected event is preserved, ingrained in the cliff face, striven in the fluted rock alluvial, of an original piece.
So personal a significance shatters beneath the weight of stories — in one ear and out, the kids know what to do (click)... I think I'll take a walk.

To safely fit within this memorizing register, check the door for automatic (autonomic?) happenstance.
One covering of cloth can be removed, but when are clothes themselves entirely dismissed?
I've often encountered the high-walled compounds of constructed abandon, fondling my eyes beneath the sunny shade.

Less is more, yeah right, I'll buy that bridge now 'kay?
Polysemous reminders of semantic lapse lay dissected in the variable tunnels of her thirsty fame.
Substitutions are allowed, spread-eagle upon wounded boundaries. I can fall for this any Tuesday night of your choosing. If I buckle too quickly, drink the one marked "hazard pay", I'll blink back on in a minute, sure.

In our last conversation in the light-well, I told you how Paradise and I returned to fight back tears, and profit from our mistakes.

Years passed. Silhouettes traced the lineaments of creased flesh.
Plasterers offered hands to mirror pleasure and restraint.
I've coughed enough for this pleurisy of grief.
Beneath a hot, bright light the tide-marked land slips away to plot its release.

What accord have I signed now?
A crucial meeting on the new revision tandem wills, purple in disbanded sorrow, knots in the cord signaling heads still down. May no harm fall to finch, wing, feather, mite nor to your hand circling my face, for mind resembles a new society as an egg or is it sperm simulates the new individual we're no longer waiting for, whom we have become.

What is at stake in battles?
The vanquished mind prepares a victory meal.
Those who must make of enforced loneliness their proud solitude also learn to do without—not without you, but your friend once was mine. Tension wanders.

I cannot harm my body.
For each voice that is not heard the future is shaped like an antenna, some super receiver to come pay receptive recompense in interpreting words that belong to a realm of ends. Seated on a barrel of goods, we await our struggle with redemption. Saturated in tone, the social order of speech arm-wrestles our whistling persons.

We've been alive for hours now, more precious infinities than the resembling needs we have come to identify with ourselves.
A fragrant urgency wafts, the windows beam and photographs of distance dissolve my eyes in the shock that comes with sense.
Interest demolishes as the past resolves, revolving here. Theaters in doorbells ring and someone somewhere rises up to answer.

With this Unquestioning Belief, I thee wed; the related categories that follow have only a bowl, and a thin knife to trim hair and nails. But life is fat, and the wind continues to chime through the trees.

Perhaps we can plea-bargain our infractions into a more serious offense, with intent of offering a defense with teeth.
The moral mine of geologic time sinks into the sea, more salty than her sweet sweat breaking on the rumpled sheets.
Another bell rings. Time to go, or wake, or speak within the silences of utterance, bracketing the ends to meet the meanings.

This device is an essential component of a global apparatus currently in operation, and it offers you its full attention for a song.

I must not look in the glass display case, for on the shelf a lens stares up at me. It is well to smile back without really knowing who has right to your own vocabulary of emotive cant, a moment before darkness when there is that no-light we often inhabit together. Oh, my friend bends, slows, thickens but still smiles.

I do not care to know you any better. I do not have to know you to turn full force and sing upon your folly.
All monuments of habit all houses, graves, faces I love may be pictured as remembered instruments wresting their moments, ardent and dismissive from the arms of an age to come, to cradle this dying one and ask it where are the works we must read?

Will we find new friends and where?
Seasons, known to change, seem to last forever.

The exposure of sky, the stop.
Return of great clouds in piles.
Derails darken, and soon the railing's fretwork is just a hand at the balcony. It bars your step, draws your step to it.
You cannot see the pattern of the sofa the figure in the carpet's a forgery to save angled appearance.

Approach is easy, access indecisive.
The riverbed rises. The water obeys.
Plain speech, a still tangle of arms is not elision, and no knowing laughter winds them in their dance.
There is only the beat-beat of the tom-tom, there is the ticking of a heart in its cage and calling for disclosure, a bright of light and pine. No one is seen setting the fire but there is the fact of it burning, tragically. I run door to door and pound the alarm, the many among many, rooms of pills and subsistence and each value, each instance. Calendrical in my futile tour, now I've forgotten the hour and the place where you and I had just missed meeting, a slipped risk. Threads interweave in the formulary, as directed and received, imposes on them a division from where letters chafe and flake in among the fruited plains.

It is the long, paved highway itself that now produces the circumstance of wildness, an inversion of the past when city was defined by the battened edge of conquer.

Fall leaves a dormant readiness, in closed eye resting on a line between multiple points.
Congratulate the surrendering hero, reading the strong draught served up and out as storms and shields collide and cease to make sense.

This morning I flip on my screen and wander.
Seven million words a day splashed by fingers, alt dot politics, bit dot listserve dot lit et et et etcetera, consumptive fair brief flashes and singed, singing of irregular blues-frequencies, banded as a bird's narrowing width.

If, thematically, old age repeats youth once I was martial, eager why is it so much trouble troublesome to remember what happened to his admirable useless frame, this I cannot answer.
Animals scurry around his feet; surely this must be what he hears. It is early, the musicians are setting up on streetcorners. Shopkeepers put out their goods in tense display. When the wind instruments enter, tenor fallen silent, he will be brought to trial for such desire, heavy and boyish, as he still possesses and shouts: "I see, I see." This means a flute shall sound inside hollow trees. If, even while class is about to begin, you will consent to await your unmirrored expedition restaurants unload on the opposite bank the night sky storms over us filling the river. Stout in her black cape, she steps from the doorway and shakes her hair. We imagine our selves urging a string section to enter, at first softly, and then she steps away from the curb, flinching, hailing a cab which arrives as a cloud of smoke and dancers.

One hour developing. By now music in full swing, families of foxes dance past us; froggy on his wire teases passers-by, stuttering
"T 'wasn't m-m-me at all, but my granddad.
He t-told me all 'bout you. Look out, he said f-for some gloomy gus in b-baseball cap!," a reiterated phylogeny of practice, shade in the deep blue of sight. I am getting older, yes, I know.

Pen and paper, like plate and spoon, belong here held in my hands, or the feet of rocks, the gesticulating meander nodding in slips and glides, water worn inside.

The pits are dug, the rocks are torn from their shelves, and I fall asleep in a great V, molded into U.
Never mind the fool's goal, listening behind.
It's the staggering climb back that make return impossible, departure from going blind.
Another year struts into the spandex town.

Today in the afternoon Express, I traced the outline of a sudden fault, split and carved like an amazingly recurring dream-score.
Certainty, no, absurdly woeful, washed and beautiful becoming clear only in retrospect, like a trance.

Beneath these tracks the past doth lay. Remember to drink the sea, a freight of foam, sand and sun.
The shadows are too quiet for their bounty.
As not only the passenger's weight is lithe in the promise of recline.
I've more than one set of nights awaiting me, listening in the distance. Upon this rock.

I was rescued after fourteen days and nights, and as the landscape slowly slipped away, I knocked my knees against all the too-frequent wall and wrapped the night across my shoulders, a shawl that was warmer than my fear. There is nothing to say when the dust settles, or the frost cracks.
She makes uniformity impossible.

She asks me where have you gone I pose, chin pulled in, head high against dark furniture, TV balanced on my thigh, where a smallish guy points to the glow off a good car, a future body angled in release. Many posters, stri-ated, worn off the side of the mailboxes artefacted modernism which no longer says I am traced against time. You are what is left when as much of you stares up from a puddle as stares down at ev'ry layer, the grain is fine.

She pressed against the glass in impersonal longing, close and divided at once—satisfied, bereft.

What might be love elided.
Perhaps in accident's decisive torment he was slumped in the phone booth details, gravel, cool fingers no, don't you dog me around.
On that day in the busstop, dog me mama you'll be six feet underground.

Immense city, beautiful and rich, saturated car wash denizens and their trunks are full of tools, the busses are empty, you have turned around to take a picture, 1/60th-f4, stainless hand-holds, luminous, unreflective glow vertical in the frame.

One can always inquire, as often I have painted a window frame white, not wiping off the splatter. When she pressed her thigh against me on the train it was twenty below, but I responded "Unconditional Money Back Guarantee" years later in the bushes above the tracks.

There is an essential thirdness, so said Pierce, so that what is determined is only acceleration. Space and time are flat, like a body locked up in a hearse and if not you and I, then who shall destroy the arrogant empire, speedily and in our days? And we say, "amen," and pass a hat between our hands, yours and mine.

And envelop encounters in sight, senseless squandering disguised as gifts (the men huddled, silent, in the horse's belly) an advocacy of dripping scarcity difficult to parse as this:
"the man raced past the wall fell" an object of the transitive verb, to race holding to our habit's course.

A willingness to compel others to endure conditions that we find offensive is the true power of the State in our lives. Sooner to be its own recipient, forgetting any soothing or false connection, we quickly learn to barely use words of praise an uncertainty that comes with loss and pain.

At the other end of this line you sit a rain of teeth in your mouth vaporous breath visible in the chilled air rapt as a bird of prey circling the ground.

There are tiny cracks in the sky above you, always a sky above, and an earth below always another place leaning inwardly to make some sense out of acts gaining a quick fist of hair ordering the ordering of a diminishing play.

I'd brake the spell of grammar like a shell, a candling mirror burned deep into the soft lens of skin.
Here we are, impossibly dressed among rows and official gatherings.
CNN reports that the soldier's body was dragged in the streets, but the damage was done.

Lone in polar privacy still leaves clinging to the tree in a small room, ill-furnished & comfortless, ceaseless wording of the uneven Winter.
Worked five long years for one man.
It's as if each leg dances not to see by but look at souls admitted to their selves had the nerve to put me out.

Upper and lower molars cooperate to laugh. Lips meet in a kiss shaking to microphone and accordion upper lip kissing lower, left and right hand have to agree, wherever intention find.

In gray, how you did, say, and where you went then, and what you found — years barely remembered seem so near, air-welds shaded insignia sunless, ecstatic.
Bright flower head, and curb cut in behind sprawled in the phone booth in the busstop basement stripped from soda decorate the proper tool you should use.

Once we have said that its straightforward surface simple, seamless, always honest invites us to portray its author ourselves and that portrait cannot be of a modest candid person, content just to work alone sure he was doing his best have we met his work then? And have we met him in the shadow portrait cast on its surface from within the work, its signature of exile hidden?

Literal, hidden product of attention not intention. But I'm being didactic again, water mooring bridge.

Only now do I know what I wanted and when the boat half vanished, I ran astern to paint that tourist, her camera scarred the unmeasured surf, and now I have no prepared words to remove from uniforms. I saw in essentials burn hands that, once in time, would be mine.

The railing was low. He walked frighteningly close to where he might fall if I were to identify him. I knew his name but not who he knew I was thinking he was.
His white shirt, open at the throat, to the air, the determined aversion of his gaze, straitened his name.

Why had I not spoken to him? The next day I made out in the paper that she had died, thrown herself over that same railing. No matter how late I walked the circumscribed city of streets circling the river, I always found something to eat, a warm place to write.

By day I'd read novels in the library.
Then night came, and I went to the streetcorner where a passing carriage had dotted his trousers with mud.
While one curtain rose, a more vivid one fell.
Only, I could never speak his name. And still can't do it.

I wanted to use the sonorous vowel of correspondence, through a saturated form, to go deep into a hypersentient marshland, and lose myself in the music of vines. There is no other time...
I'd take this conversation to one of my fathers, someone in line who would quickly hear in the death of one, the death of another implying a name, spoken, entered into the ground, closed against our sight to stand on the shoulder of freshly turned earth that dilutes sensation far from the shrouded form, though such insolence of effect isn't what I came here for.

Words, music, vines. A walking tour of the west uncovering varied lands in the line of your opened face. So now speech is something of the body? or of the land? taken and individual, found and shared I push this letter into your outstretched hand hidden with me in your thoughts.

The damp sweetness of cedar swelled from the earth not the incandescent luminance promised at the horizon, but a wisp of pure resemblance clinging to her palm.
Years in the past he'd met her in the northwest, brought her to LA, and when the streetcars departed so did she, taking the child away. Nothing could console him, and in recompense he shot his world full of wooden figures, easing his death inside it.

When she fell limp to the floor, consciousness evaporated before she'd said a word, a final seduction failing her breath and dropping away.

Should I forget about her ability to persist, feeling safe to spin and wreck upon whatever reef turns up?
I'd certainly surface inside the bubble I already reside in, check the pressures still as phosphorescence, limited to what manifests, not what has past.

Such a couple it makes! Peace, at too much heat to want it, and thinking, drafts of little meat to share. It's a long way down the rocky ghost at clock's speed, graphite telling you to grasp the bland riches, none too lush to front a theater, swollen and fatted.

One minute I drafted the response, the next moment's glaze dotted my eyes, sleeping too much for the day. We have pleasure in the water, trained to swim at birth. I just can't separate the trailing, wounded turbulence from the sheets beneath your skin. I told you about my sleeping on the grass, waiting after dark for a sign that quiet had finally come.

One extended stay among lakes of anger was enough to change my habits, as you might note while breaking through the door.
Hearing your delicate arrival renewed my taste for sulfur and fire, smoke like memory lingering in the air.

I shook the sleep from my hair until the river at our feet swelled above the table. So many cards placed on a table. Too much at stake for those not of blood and birth or hearth, friends along the way, left or lost in wind and rain, and never returned to.

You do not want what you say you want, my friend, or would you have glanced away in any case, from so many chances to swim in the silver linings of beautiful cumuli tumbling among reflections to leave black-clouded songs of pride among us, we who remain on the short side of nothing?

When invited to perform at the Sutherland Lounge and the Burning Spear, I saw you couldn't resist, being a boundary buster, and joined in.
I said, "I'll sing for a sign." Past polysyllabic, we came in for grief in the land of quantitative futures, where esters off crumpled leaves at tunnel's end rose back of the yards. A storied irony like "Blue Jew & 'The Rockin' Rabbis." You reached for that quick enough, I'd say.

So we prepared to quit mutual pastures.

While I bared my waist, big legs at the borders, and always crossing guards smiled as their barriers lifting into our way brought peace to the world, at least you would have no part of it. Not peace, no, but science — source of all silence — you demanded.
Time to sit back, order out, looking tough, an edge of distraction upon our concentration. Yet, I agreed to be older brother, youngest son, char whatever upset you would upset me;

and wondered what you'd bet me.
I had to find out, to know this for myself.
So I wrote you a letter, addressed to suite seven, where a Place was always burning to consume its foundations.

Knowing you'd be there, I ate flowers and crowns off the book literal literacy and turned around; you were sitting at my feet.

I had to make profession of my claims, if you'd let me; obscurity, with which, still, I was reproached when, young brother, you confronted me: "What use are these decorations? Aren't words and letters enough?" "Turn around," I said "you'll find, like clouds reflected on the river that twelve words were not twelve years; the same voice went there and back." Poverty of spirit the nations call it while they beat their time on our sanctified backs.

But, it's just holes in meaning, like pauses in history whose insignia still mire an imagined voice, whose every comment neutral, whether right or wrong, does not really want to speak of flame or of the sharpest thing flame had sent or if its position's strong.

This they reproach us with — but, it's not a sin.
It's what we put our faith in.

Bopping up the pearl driveway in the rain, the easiest of suburban reasoning scratches to get in. God knows there's a car door, but no, not this one, with a firm belief in comfort and convenience. Don't bother me, if I don't have to. "Today may be the first for the rest of you, but me?

I've got 10% down and 90 to go!" Cantilevering my origins with my circumstances isn't nice.
The director's cut left out more than was shown leaving me with the stunning observation that perhaps I was better off in the dark.

Privately, something matters.
The way rain water drains from the sloping roof prairies of companions drift by and smile like the girl with the diamond just a glint of light to blink and cry out in. I've a way with beginnings, and you see yourself in that.

The ghosts are afoot downstairs "Who are they this time," I ask (a rhetorical device).
117 years of transient human motion, horse-drawn to carless. While the mail falling into the house sets me racing for the door the meanest exponent of the harquebus powers by on four round legs screams corners, while waves of flesh raise the alarm: Death Monster! It's Death Monster!

A small exaggeration.
Actually, nobody seems to notice it though nearby there's a stenciled rose to mark the place where a man and his bike were nailed one afternoon.

But enough particulars.
Chomsky and Parenti, seldom given voice on the build-boards of our Great And Noble Land, take second place to the question of the day:
"What's the Frequency, Kenneth?"

Ah, the ignoble averages of our time.
Cold air and starlight seep through a brittle roof, margins of entrance, the weak spot proving to be the best place for hiding.
The legions prepare, and the enemies list themselves alphabetically — we're all law abiding folks after all, and wouldn't want to offend or inconvenience.

Can't I talk this out of you?
Exorcise your freedom to choose, and take leave.
You may suddenly discover that part of your "eye" is an ascent up an artifact, draping the peak of what actually happens.
(The logic of the insane is a fragrant rose.) Look around... can't you see what I mean? Reds and grays of mau-mau curses and vain, fantastic weapons. It's only words.

The moment the creature awakes in the lab its education begins.
Then virtues, hunting down every memory, the knotted net that holds its body to the frame. You see, its experience are his, being the shifts from handles to machine to desire a trivial massaging of a loose tooth in the rain, the landscape is so charming.

Each of us carries around a room, both phone and call to make. Knowing this, fall silent, there is nothing deletes artists rubbing walls.
Footsteps on the way upstairs they are out talking with book and librarian alike.

Hurry though we must, gruffly, ev'ry gnostic saying is nor prophecy.
Not every word without surface sense hides from what to say, shouts our loud.
Laughter burns, keeps us moving footfalls dropped, each in contact with the others across an ironwork bridge into town.

They won't be told to talk — across not above a silence into which we have not fallen cult of personality in which I held my mother and now hold you stretched outside heavenly shelter, at arm' length, —bell rings, birds fly off, poet makes notes, even to this length.

As if nearness, something not to get used to?
a distant figure pushed down on a plunger, seemingly to no effect, but after a moment the landscape blew up.
Leaning back to forget whatever he can the young man resumed his study of a book puzzled as the letters laughed.

A bystander mocks protestors as they march arms raised in a false query:
"What about me" (so he seem to want to ask).
With no way to answer his image, others will notice, joining us all in legions of those whose touch, hairy mask, coin and cancer, rhymes further words.

A magic called fiction, is that what saves them in portraits, on contact sheets wide arc of blacktop pathway.
Balzac's character, the one that gazing down at the river, would have jumped.
Social portraits arise en route, beginning with memories, as a kind of homecoming.

A neighbor smokes in his yard.
Another shifts his embarrassed mask, dropping words, as at the corner of a tablecloth fabric drops in small diamond folds. Hands too are folded or else grip a chair.
Ev'ryone tense for capture, so they are apparati in uniform.

A wide arc of blacktop path swings away behind her. Her eyes exactly at the horizon, left arm bent and hand on right shoulder, why do we concentrate on spiritual victory, all this that is out of reach.

Preoccupied with the kids, unsuspecting, though nervous, quite uncertain I see now what no perspective proves, he's bent features warm — widely smiling over paper, back to a warm October morning sun. Pricetag on his wrist he preaches to used refrigerators, false consciousness, in off-white.

We get up, take our seats in the theater they stay the same, huffing in a sly corner not far from the isle of love... situations, negotiations, penchants formerly unavailed of habitat, like a disposable thumb.

On the slick edge of migration, measurements of loose skin sink their vanity in my hand.
Blood boils out in numbers synthetic combinations forge sinecures, and yesterday many more gathered for the plump betrayal. Mr. Smith, I mean Mr. and Mrs. Smith, went shopping in the dark — I'll take that one, and the little brown ones too, they thought in a happy voice: who am I to complain... I'm not complaining!

Their voice is a deictic sign, motion running vagrant on the silvered page.
Popcorn honey, or a twist?

Summer drains down the backs of their necks, wet dreams of youth, ten years 'fore the air-conditioned mast.
Mystery, it is. My own turn at bedlam wouldn't explain the pull and tuck when I sailed in their yard, Mr. Smith like a giant clam in the rain.
I'm being unkind? Primetime screamed from their livingroom every single nite, and even the gophers ran from the pathological mise-en-scene shining on the vacant blinds. Ah, Camelot!

She says, "Thank you very much." Many yearlings simmered in the stew, but I'd never chew on my own arm.

It's a hunting way of life; there's all this meat here, and lookie, there we are something like a pastoral disaster spreads the pride we feel at the horizon, colors in all the finely veiled threats of nightfall.
The disposable character grimaces.
"Something's got me!", pulling him down to the sand a brush with greatness of a different sort.

He is opening one eye, imbrication among the stars, the hasp of telephones, encumbrances in a past of tense and layered indexes.
It's beginning to expand, the purposeful, desiccate jell we call "home."

But there is much to praise in the raised surface, running minds over brilliant and bell-driven spells that give and make and never fail to name, even if mistakenly.
In the neglected preview, surface order can't account for the variations in form impacting right in the middle of your past.

Tickets fire and recall an arrangement brought out on the morning tide, a handsome clutter hopeless and triumphant, razor between lines of act and circumstance. Tell me what you mean, what you tell, techniques then, and liars who rain the present in lies.

What you wrote on the large stone, to survey dawn graying light, your chisel was a trumpet left lying in the square. I learned that some of these letters exploded, fastidious and climbed out of narrow streets the like of which you cannot see anymore.

I'd only been there once before you pointed within the rubble at searchlights where the low lake ripples, and I saw their glowing concision, how open tops started to cut, to spread weary shapes, far from complete, clouds before the cited dawn, streets full of uniforms and fresh tar drying.

It's late to start such projects, as if insisting that one's correspondent stop knocking against another guy's hallway, it is so insidious.
Rhymed exile expulses song the way singing voices bell.

Exhausted we watch buildings, see parking lots where the gate swings up, and man and car drive out.
Dirt analyzes shovel too. He blinked his almond eye, tore time to a paper doll, and walked out as the books tumbled from his desk.

Perhaps this word's redundant, a braid of glass, so that eternity changed him to himself at last, and sand ran out beneath his song, but I hope not for death triumphs in strange voice.
The centuries turn before our efforts sustain them; they shorten our lives.

At least it's steady work, I'll say that for it, the image we became when we stopped changing and rallied you to our pause.
Or with too much in your view absorbed in kiosks of bonbons, looking down, your eyes fall out of focus;
you don't notice: what we've waited for is here.

A field of arrows inked between the nations, the sight and mind of all who pass, these plaques write history on public walls.
If never we slow, their music still picks up.
Yet combatant, witness, victim disappear, and stones too, thought to outlive participants, erode, or else they are smashed.

Scars don't outlive a body.
Songs you were taught to erase fought their wars here. Stubbed out tongues doubled or forgotten; remember to touch shadowed archives under sky; their edge, unruly, flowing away, you will not yearn to redeem. You must.

And compute rage. I wouldn't give two crooners for his book Bing & Time; too much frills a flea with pillows of heel! Prosa-ically he drills his welt, rewriting his unwriting, fouling my si-lenced with what evers, he really mendt to kill.
Still alive, I'm glad you're dead!

Yes, yes, one two three for five star, chauffeur, glad he's alive.
Exiles write in reg'lar forms just like reg'lar worms under their reg'lar storms at least so my research shows and how-e'r my research goes I will follow its flows like swarms to the hive.

I never ran a conclusion of this ilk that head's up and inferencing bullets pistol whipped into the padded air between I love you — your eyes — and my head, when you've killed me.
Carpet knells your thin, oscine temper, valent between three or more varieties of fright not meditation but analysis, that cops once too many times at the corner story — Good Life! its experiences limited to vestment profundities, mankind speaks and when you que up in the freezing sheets of rain needs another length of rebar to complete, then pushes away, else I've completed the same.

Bouncing act, saccharin fills the shell of a "perfect" bilateral body, assembles loners at home, national-level competence thrusts inside. I know you thought it was progress, but after all, the instancy of history adds up, commands much more than a withering memory.

My fingers are on track, dipped and fetid in your deep peach the only thing between you and my body jasmine, another phorosynthate, mirrored behind a heavy curtain throwing shoulders and rocking as I do to fall beneath you in the flood.

Memory, blinking to change information reaching greater radiance, manually elevated in stages then, I remember, background and punctuation, craving attachment, or understanding its decor.
Too much paper! I crush in the swelling to speak to you, too much to say like the dark matter between some distant stars mountains of it, and my runnellings, only now nowhere nothing sees me.

This is the foundry, lightning sweeping dusts of history, many covers chiding those within not to take it so hard.

"Your death has been perfected."
"A zipper runs down my chest."
"My world is redirected."
"Cups fill and empty again."
"This column holds us inside."
"Does this trail lead to the ridge?"
"Morning emerges thinly."

Ideas represent imagery, drinking fires that spread from rubble to ancient town layers of debris, creates and dispenses within sight of the distant, birded land.
Development from holes to wallet, trees to pallet, a taste for easy fixes, never mind the consequences now!

The television memes my mind perfectly, exit this way..., no, above the volcano where we've built our nursery hammer to stone, the roadway of ash and fault spun into the Theme World we call home.

And part of it reaches inward, waves for fun flags of many messages tying the sky to a national desire unalloyed, periodic ruling out of line outcasts identities, protected only by a reticence to speak their mind from what back-tracked other thoughts.

Which ones? A woman at a slanting severe style sense desk, what of the man next to her, CD spinning in silent CD player?
He hears a trumpet, humming into her ears, scratching into prison walls.

He reads what prisoners draw:
"Old cagey Harry hit bee cones. Honey set — a sorry, tawdry, dull, curt thing — honey tall." Still, when hid meaning ceases, "Occasionally it becomes unnecessary to draw the curtain on it all." Such abortive gestures win reality, or suburban opprobrium. "Parents should spend more time with their children," the country novelist announced to applause.

This trail leads right to the fridge.
Bright, wet leaves still stick to trees.
The weather's wet, but not cold.

I wish to have met you before my decline; to have driven north into the glowing holes of the northern states of love, exchanging what we found for reprieve. Through southern states of love, when the weather was fine and modern verse on the CB had grieved us.

I don't want to stop speech at silence, either to address scribbled margins interior to the redone cupola dome of word-crowned gesturing that moves laterally like an amoeba setting off again and again on what from here looks like adventure, but in fact is my mechanical observing.

Were Georges Perec and Paul Celan acquainted?
Where would you have looked for love?
Setting off on a walk, we'd arrive in town irritated by the friendless journey of temporary language, nightly Stopovers in tame motels, prize chains and bedclothes of wards.

Still, I did set out each time to leave you, to tear open our rash darkness or lose it in vengefulness.
Whatever may be the resulting pattern are languages with no names, only quantities and measured-out doses halting and repetitious:

Then can't I help it, if I have no other.
If I can't help it, then I have no other.
If no then, I can't help it, I have other.
Then, if I can't have no help, no other I.
If no other I, help can't then I it have.
Then no it I can't have if I help other.
Help! Can't I have other? It if no then? I?

Performance of mockery, self-parody.
It makes my hair stand on end.
Eye held in camp, no other evidence for evidence. Don't stop at that.
A shadow cupped, whether in paper or glass — I am not mocking myself but these word; which are they — message or bottle?

Listen up, this is the first time I'll talk on this subject.
Do you believe these people?
One end of the stick they burn for warmth; the other they carve into a cross to worship. One of ours they grab and murder then, hup!, WE did it, and they make him their God.

When, in "Tenebrae," Celan has their savior descend to drink dark blood, like Odysseus in our (under)world, he finds a mirror and his source, a knowing connection, productive betrayal, a trench of blood:
You were of us, now kill us.
The other's ontology, not history.

Still, it rises to our gorge.
I imagine them as friends captured in stances of rebellion. One looks over his shoulder, convinced of my benign intentions, but they are not, for I have reversed his stance; his mind is not on another but itself — lamb upon stone. Invested we are, cut of patterns as long as any length of sight, filling and filled with just enough providence to stand and split the succulence.

Copula! Here it is! between resistance and as so, my's, perhaps just one at a time illicit flickering sense to make it glow.

There's lots of excuses for what happens here, at night, too wired to sleep and in the day, staying awake props one arm while the other one fixes, doing the job it knows best a tie, slap, a hit, in, pull back, in again and you're off, between the harsh light and the wall memory relishing its groin, dancing in tune within it, one room of many mansions cutting up the best, arranged in composite entities shunted between harnesses and braced between guise. Here I sit, stories of my silver-throated highway sewn in revers. Tell me all that sings. Let me siphon the last, cool lick of life before tracings erase the night air, with the borders around us (in tatters and all), grasping onto the sweet breath that introduces love.

Carbon shaped into a form unrecognizable at any distance miasmas in the dark, huddled mass of flesh; hell if I know what it is.
Remember how we'd sit on the lawn as kids making callous, entertaining predictions about the probable outcomes of people passing by? "Will collect shoes and drink kool-aid." But what if this never occurred? Are you tricked into thinking that I was talking about my childhood? I don't want you to feel cheated. I'm writing about this because something happen.

Did you not want to believe?

She sits behind an ornately carved wooden table, bisecting our view by an empty picture frame. Her hand touches her bowed head, brow rests on a cut of fabric, perhaps of tears.
All of this is shown—an arm and stand holding the frame before her, a prop, an extending limb of realized semblance. And so she sits, the picture of a picture of grief, with her

The shuttering of image, Castiglione, Countess of Her Own Domain, lifts more than her hooped skirts when she broached her legs.
And so do you, when you leaf through the mirrored pastimes of extending youth or haul in from a tantalizing insult, come here, I'll recover what it is I fear wetter than most anything the naked thirst and swallow of a long walk like following hand to thigh.

Which is it we must prefer...
Gemeinschaft or Gesellschaft?

Ordination of results, the plague-rats frolic in the afternoon sun with everything else slipping between fingers found by another, and so never denied.
So many letters, look at them. Decide which shards are shifting through the inevitable cracks, their fragments clutching the shape of the whole.

When I heard plane engine rev saw a black hand wave at clouds I hoped to walk again with you, my own love find peace in train stations, and not wave goodbye with memories or music.
So simple, too simple, I should have known then where and when I was moving.

The slightest recollection of his seated posture, as he aimed at the old corner house unceasing object of our speculation, with slim fingers half-harbored inside thick sleeves, beck'ning confidence of one too frail to live, not hardy enough to die. "There" he pointed,
"shall we mix the metals of Arnaut Daniel."

But never take the No-doz that made you sleep not again, or you will rise until heart-shells, feeble in their zones, spun in fibers fever gets to keep, cranial pairs, skinned-shape eyes thinking imagines as selves in aspect real, heads hang down o'er falling hair.

You may call this string of pearls its entrance marked "A" and "B." Hers was a large soul; she had a soul to match.
What you have done or written watches what you think, yanking the wheel rightward to pull off the peripheral artery on the small road that leads home.

As if the mental process "you can't do that" knows you can in a symbol before effort intervenes.
Even wind rises inside something, only we never know what we point out, a cubical scene of love in the library, that gripping in dream sluice, where water, not level, is not formal. You see, there is no reason to complete the statement, if behind a door other forms complete it for you anyway.

Associated with gesture, with action a schema has us moving.
In this sense I am here, and I reach for you.

Inside my kiosk, surrounded by it bar of candy and the bubble (but who put them there?) gum jars, I feel my chin, hair stubble removed from the damaged car, and know I'll never leave another level, trapped in my kiosk—that my need to revel among the corporate stars, to be touched by balling fists as I begin my only constellation piecing enough luck to miss their hemicycled faces, though they're all darkness traces just lights the metro map next to my station.

If anyone can write rhyme without regard for networks, yet none connects, disconnects mellifluous cabledoms; drives and printers cross building like a gambler's fingers, and the big bet-jerk he is heartless. He will yet leave us insufficient time.

Table legs, father, his legs. ever a moment alone.
The dry stars don't fear speaking;
if you are near her finally, then love her.
Metaphor will not ravel, metonymy seals it off. Give you a flower: it's my life.

It? — But I know no objects.
My? — No one that foolish.
Life? — Skin dragged upon sand pit, no monument, no signs, even arrow points lacking, only a periphery of idiots rapt in pinioned opinion, reft of their wars, yet, when they find us, they will know how we loved, unknowing, a joint, a scab where it's only about time.

Now, in each other's cubicle the windows radiate too little transportation. If morality is the curse that matters most I've always settled out for what it's worth for.

Are we not the recipients of glory?
My friends gather, thanking gave 'round each other, a rededication to our survival whether we're in there or not.
"Homeless With Children" may yet be a sitcom but it's dark... love in the dawn so full and scarce and fast of bounty as here.

Unchanging search for noise maintaining the routes I've seen to choose between an unmarked return, and lines the litter set to changing flailing in our whispering.
What the music told us then, over bridges into sight, what's left of it air informing November her rain broadcasts sweetly across the plane, wet s something for everyone! The place to run to get out of a gravestorm (I offer this text, to watch) a diameter, the size of a cut in the fitful sleep of nearby civil unrest.

There's been a fire here, or thunder, rain, or the sound of rain blanketing along in the deep, dripping dark of burnt out buildings. Carry on for good, the pace catches the survivors of yesterday's fire, and tomorrow's too as if speaking to you now are you there before or after it happened?

The resulting grace note, so hard to see and when it's seen, the most impressive event stretched to reach an infinite trick — to steal from you while you want to pay all very righteous, but don't ask their children (I think they've lost their children) you may not get the answer they expected.

How much comfort must be left before something catches, and you reach to fall farther in the immediate world than is possible even in your mind, saying something, even unkind, or unfeasible there is no pointless location, though damage exists, brutal and persistent in our lines.

So will the spark, so does the laden imbue and the second speak. So tell me about this:
"In 1988, 54 of us were arrested for serving free food." Compare: In 1988, 54 of us were arrested for serving free food. What is the difference between an explanation and a cannon? — another significant event in the passing discourse, knock knock knock I can't come in, pouring back and forth between a glass and wine and a glass this is the dream, the one you had over and over as a child, a recurrence never again to return, unlike the silence, unlike too many things (I drank the juice of soil and survived) fastened to the most detailed of histories if they're bad because they're here take a look: the whole body is connected no minor effect, as execution weighs somewhat farther than relief action, thought, semblance, thought, to knock again into sound, moving into air they too want to be adored, and who'd blame them?

To adore, to spurn is easy for us all hot or cold, enough demand for balance that the very strength that's valued turns to weakness in us when it isn't matched.

Sand on the way to being stone, glass, slips through my fingers or I dropped a glass and a splinter cut me.
Later when I tiptoed into the kitchen carefully, I used a new broom to sweep up but when I looked into the new dust pan, there were no glass fragments, just dust.

I slipped from my seat, and hid underneath the dining room table. Across from me were your legs, your feet.
The next day the neighbors moved.
No matter you see through it, still a mirror.
Like the bird to its page, each word was trimmed to fit its cage.

So, my fingers grew small scars where they had touched metal, glass and a whole sentence functioned as a word would to indicate rejection, even disgust vaunting dismal dances, taking positions.
To err is no political act. Give them jobs, a chance to fall in line, to compete. Where their foreheads plow gray-green earth their lips are moving still, if you just listened: decembrian field, bronze route.

They needed a sentence, because they lacked a word for what and where they were.
"Gone to lay head on lonesome railroad iron, til the 2:19 come crease my worried mind," and other industrial verse versions on Experimental Row, dance polished ebony wingtips.

Down the block, where birds suffer still, insistent rage, syntax insists I've studied black fate charred in other apartments, but I have not.

The morning Fred Hampton died, murdered by the Chicago Police Force, I toured his apartment. Boards placed on the floor crossed pools of blood.
For some reason, the police hadn't sealed the place.
Black Panther party members asked for people to come and witness the scene.

A straight score crossed the window between the alley and his basement room where the pane had been quietly removed. His mattress, soaked in blood, twisted off its box spring.
Interior walls of the rooms were pocked with bullet holes, trajected inward. No outward facing holes — the dead don't fire.

It was then I decided to move away from Chicago, a cowardly act, no doubt and not the response the Panthers had hoped to inspire in someone like me, potential friend or at least ally. But their struggle scared me as much as the police did. Virtue had been to be their cannon fodder, but I'd had a gun drawn on me once by a plainclothesman at a demonstration, and fired into the air, then been maced; I turned and ran.

Those were mad days of autobiography.
There might still be a fire in every stone water rolls over, rocks uncut by presence if the stone surface is gone, or nothing sealed.

Our obsessive thematic.
The room was crowded. I could not understand the discourse, an air punctuated by yells or muttering, raised right fists, what were barely words yet lived on their own, each person's expression touching the other's in air alive, was not dying.

A night cut in two; is it you speaking now writing grass, dirt, red leaves, rain refreshing, hungry as ever silent schools are hungry. New stone in my pocket today rolls down library alley.
Books. Like nights the books come too closing in on other words.

I'm noticing a chamber of events, gone too far to wrest the rain from clouds pushing up the adiabatic slide.
Together we watched the live television sight of a passing torch; where it would be touched would bury lives and deaths. The 60s were here a new generation to plow the same land the French had bet and lost on, incidently a solution to Hampton's ilk: In Country, out of sight in Vietnam.

I was knee-high to an ironing board, and she was ironing, splendid and beautiful in a white dress, the echoing of Kennedy's inaugural speech a backdrop to silence.

I won't argue with her now... we can't talk about something she'd never see.
I can barely entertain the present case, the friends I have to console resulting hack and grind of limitless force applied to people who are limited in their capacity to endure violence.

The police still practice random assault, a very effective way to inspire fear in populations difficult to control.
It takes too little saved to save your own skin, but sometimes that's the best that needs to be done.
Long will the demand of sacrifice be felt, while life itself is fragile there is no response sufficient to the act translating pleasure and pain in candle wax, sealed and stamped with the necessary needs of life. We can count our time withdrawing, an eventual sovereign in hand, then WHACK! but I won't degrade the many brutal deaths by refusing life to live.

Another mound perhaps, and winter's descent like a frozen beach of bones pursues some more than others.
I listen to your breathing, the flesh of breasts set against the cool night air.
You hold me; I count the stars below the hand that holds us.

Two satellites slip across the morning sky.
In the grass below, their valuable prey breathing and calculated a previously unknown variety of consumer conceives what's necessary, imagining something that in retrospect seems entirely obvious and right.

You can't eat your Earth and have it too, they thought hidden in the grass. Now bet that two more'll make a market, thought the satellite above.
We've imported the land from Argentina, the perennial bunch grasses were replaced with scotch broom, from sea to sea...
Let's head'em off at the pass — they'll barely notice the same!

There is a contradiction in approach, between alien reptiles released and freezing in 50 degree air, and what It feels like to lie on this hill.
There's Just nothing else to do with it except maybe doing it again.

To affirm is to unburden that which lives something easier to do again than do.
I curse. Will you sing along? apparently absorption can't swallow it all, so we lie, profitless and fallow, here between the cracks.
Stories trickle down to us or around, tied like a string through the furtive, quiet streets entirely flying, but low enough to descend through fear and private apprehension into my eyes. There I sit, absorbed into something familiar, in the drifting of a red balloon.

Yes, this is a mean old world where I cry to remember calling up again the things we used to do ropes stretch along windy streets of mid-winter.
To live by yourself or live with someone else I say I pity the fool makes his nest on cold, cold ground.

The trees they climbed were surrounded by law grass — that's law grass, not low grass — hedged by protective procedures.
No-one would put them down, drive them out of town.
When one among them fell, whereas a pagan knew how to settle down, cookin' slow gravy, solid, that tzadik ought not have been wasted by his Shield of protected dutifulness.

So it was we fell to apostasy, our two souls walking side to side, mine and I mean my cousin's henceforth known to all as the other, "Aher," my name was Elisha ben Avuyah. My student Meir still visits me, excommunicated though I am; he reads to me. "Whoever studies Torah for its own sake... one may say the world is found deserving for his sake — he is called Beloved Companion, and gladdens the Divine Presence as he gladdens all creatures." Such are his words.

Study robes him in humility and fear.
He is an overflowing fountain and a torrent of ideas above creation.
Meir learned young; I wrote of him "One who learns when young is like ink written on new paper. One who learns when old is like ink blotted on erased paper."

Or so says one tradition.
The voice of Otis Rush says, trying to live by yourself cannot get you one you love, the smallest operation mind undertakes is judgment. Empty doorway.
Like It, form fills again with flute-music in a bottle corked in oxygen ocean.

Context spurs expression, certainly you hear that, can you really hear that?
Repeat, repeat; read, reread until your feet find a road?
Sunk, the bottle returns, turned back into sand.

And so the wilderness where he finds himself affords two advantage at least among word-wary, myth-entrapped nomadic tribes, to my effort to understand big voices I ever see confront me.
What are these advantages?

First off, heroes and their gods repeat themselves braid axioms learned in school.
Secondly, what speech I hear is not expressed in language I claim to know.
It is foreign, not hidden, evident hour motionless, true reflected light emerging from within a stone image, aspect real closing before your eyes merge heart-shells. Feeble in their zone, night fibers, fever places hand in hand's cranial pair.

Shadow's skinned shape of thinking has made its way out your mouth.

Clone calls "Boss!" he wants to know can a poor boy come back home?
Part no partner, you've been gone way too long. That sand through hourglass, those sealed suns, will not turn to glass again.
Ladders climb, stutter akimbo; mine your way out of the south and begone.

It's a world old means, yes along capillary hills and the valleys of a night's shift. Hemistich still, mixed words; you crack a shell on the carpet drag a dime, a line winnows the mortal immortality of judgement.
I see: you've come to murmur lines in the back room; we've come to merge our separate ways and features. Nests are ground for some... is that a judgement or a prescription?

Trellis, without knowledge, just another ground?
The floor swells, and has emotional value categories to symbol.

To commit is to predict.
Pleasure and panic commits, a theater of marques finds comfort in this. Maps running in reverse:
"To unpaper a sleeve, hold the top firmly, and with care not to resist, remove the arm from the ridge."

A commons of meaning exists along the avenues, where dialogue offers order.
"It's free because it's yours," our simulation mulched with newspaper and the tops of tables crops of greens and potatoes inscribed headlong, political, and all that eating, sleeping, raying dry.

Air is only free when you inhale it.
Swimming across the river in late afternoon for launch developing facial ticks retrospective brush with death business-suited giddiness
"I'm a safe, and so happy" that returning the favor, the pleasure of dominion the arctic frieze of a wall, looming over warp and wrap mind over imbrication, limits itself to reflect a perpetual heir, inherency, where to satisfy remains.

Who did you think was coming?
Oh Daddy, you whore, you fucking gigolo who you have made into what.
The woman is perfected, imitación de Cristo, perfected no serve para nada.

Tell me, haven't you the vocabulary to speak, living where you are?
Subjects of discussion show how acquired everything is, a lack of ability, immune to the distances distanced from deficiency death recalling a syndrome of the familiar and the unfamiliar.

Certain compromises will have to be made adjustments in distribution, masked by a disassociation, allows acceptance of what would, in more personalized contexts, be seen as too inadequate, or unfair.
But then, no one is immune.

We gather in the kitchen as late as the hour gets and how cold, the temperature of the ground a handful of windless thoughts of violence, the morning nothing is more, that is sure finishing the long hours.

Tame shudders and persistence limitless performance, depth predictive of calm expatriate. Listen to the long line... involvement, in cascading observation distillate smuggling and everything you could say in fifteen seconds between the clocks, between spans.

Say or sing, so our song goes — "Evil, lovely, lovely, dark." What you see, it is the object festival of mental minds.
Water refracts the rusty drain to beauty a jewellic oxide, but when it empties ugly all over again which I don't mind, looking down real time, real experience?

Then you may look back at me, lovely singer.
Your gaze and you will die first, one hand forward, one in retreat, I've been there and back, like you, before you, so my speech already gleams with seduction's push and pull in adequate relation to a world wherein our hands investigate pleasure to sing into form-describing shape, laborless, but where is this honesty?

To recommend one's own spirit will not do — tricks we strain to get beyond.

No achievement reports, please.
Without looking back, I have returned alone.
I strum my lyre and listen, drumming voicebox, one arm raised, one eye lowered.
Yet, I have been unable to uncover or shovel, turn or shoulder, hand to hand upon this path.

Amateur botanist, a poor one at that, still, I follow yellow blooms that lead me to your doorway.
Carved out, empty, lots of room for the head (yours) I set there and others gape. Unceasing, it prophesies: "Eurydice, black jewess, island dropper you are the hole in my sock, in my pocket, in my shoe."

"Bye-bye pagan past, swarming stale myths of handled objects are only more applejack, hearth of male stills way up in unraveled hills."
I prefer what I'm part of yet will not name.

Did I send you that message I now get back in a form of frenzy, mouth set, though fullest ever love elsewhere, voices not in air of those who departed I hope co visit or will visit me. Exiled terms of thought; they don't let go.

A doorway, no a stairway cut through a ravine. Welcome, warm welcome upon your return home from your wide world trip.
What trace underlies this view?
A false grandeur stolen from ideas of God and loaded on the back of old history?
In this way, something priceless has been lost, a people themselves as themselves no a stairway, a doorway.

The walls lined with political documents constitutions of intercultural states and obscure artworks, poems in quatrains of a dreadful isolation find your friend fully herself.

A stairwell the present. Flights lead away, tempo andante, pacing off a dormant space of perception in concern. o I cannot reach the distant space thought of but am in it anyhow, like a barking dog whom we know does not bite:
does the dog also know this?

Ice darkens the deck around the new mat, as above the door icicles melt then refreeze.
Most beloved most respected addressee, this letter is not for you, so you may think.
But if you wait a moment — the briefest one — everything will go away. You'll be left to peer through bottle glass at your own urgent words.

You addresses the one you know, and so you, to someone else, no one not previously mentioned, grab a seat inside out of this nasty weather, no sense being uncomfortable, never argue with you.
It's we that makes assumptions that old excuse: Your letter's in the mail pigeon holding in the folds of its wing not quite the opening you expected through.

Rain sluices down the gutters, gutters of rain sluice down the glass, rivulet cycles of ice, radiant, telegenic the most perfect alumnus cobalt blue, draped in the very finest type umm... excuse me would you please remove your needle from my arm?

Trust me; you won't feel a thing, just a pinch...
Done! Now wasn't that easy?
The world drips down the glass as it's raining in the rain.
I am writing a letter at the neighborhood cafe, baggy 30s atmospherics, permanent adolescence growing in the soup-kitchen arcade of 90s culture.

So abandoned, the need for artistic grief cast in high school silhouette.
Unwilling to isolate the life/art field everything's changing, the dissolution of arbitrary rifts between performance and production has a fuzzed over Dali describing his cure for the freezing garret, capital increasing enterprizes perched twixt his greatly waxed mustache.

It's time, the year in pictures Medea and the waif look a mind/body parallel Zeno never imagined farther and farther the days lengthen, hours of sunlight sliced and scratching in the sand.

The caller raises an interesting point: it's raining, and two people are standing on a corner.
Who are they, what do they want?
I'll take my answer off-line, as you've weighed it long enough.
This is a reordered broadcast; please don't call.

Then literal revolutionaries in San Cristobal de las Casas, Chiapas declare war on the Mexican government briefly capturing four towns demanding legitimate elections and food for the hungry, medicine for the sick the free trade zones of indigenous action.

Millennia vs. melancholia of the cool, black night-life 60s, 70s, 80s catalogued and collected for your digital pleasure, interactive and referenced to become everything you wished it could be entered without descending to the mud below our feet, habitat of squatters avoiding squander fundamentally offensive, and never quite encountered in polite conversation hand mirrors and collisions down along the water line, where water won't draw the line through pavement into slow collusive dread cracks of mica-like chunks — traffic for holding down a trash can lid; arms round pipe I slid down from garage roof to alley, blood clotting hair having too much fun to run.

Waist deep in what already once in a while wants to burst always the replacement order is simpler has not been enough for us like McCarthyism — it just came and went not that effects had been what we'd've wanted blushing, purple, breathless — I mean unable to breathe, wrapt in re-election — I don't think of that at all, it was over before us the warm night, flat streets lit by passing cars, the el above, in the record store I bought from the red-blazered clerk "Something Else" a great session, and he recalled me from the Modern Jazz Room, where we agreed on the pewter of Silver's tone how easily — I'd have been the only white fifteen year old in the place that for sure — who cared! Just to be remembered dancing a shuffle by the piano bench or Miles in pigskin overcoat makes a call on the public phone next to the restroom, while the band plays Avid Restraint and already sick, I drink more bourbon, mind lost in a focus recalled the stain as vivid now as then, fifty seven.

By then german philosophy's lost its way truth of language. A glass in Rimbaud's honor!

No use but I can't drop it thinking I'll need memory even more later, when there's less now than now.
Then too we dug and we dug bad pun, the air full of smoke and full of graves.
No use to me I mean — sure but, could it be otherwise?

Habitual laughter, errands and shopping, grinding gears as whoever drives still counts time.
They have taken the towns of Switzerland, Greece for their conferences and their congresses on how perfect cows will smoke you with their bells.
They walk on sand, talk through glass, stalk your hand, then waste your ass!

Who remembers Sidney Hook? No one, I hope.
Adorno soon to follow, who begrudged Benjamin's evident requests.
Worse, who would have been happy to accommodate himself to Hitler, had only the Nazis allowed him: after all he notes — he is only half Jewish (the smaller half). A rumor? perhaps, but I choose to believe it, do as you will.

My instructions are illegible, global competitiveness plays taps in halls without their old walls.
Still, inclined to listen as the dead's behests are voiced, a phalanx hollows the gone men, climbed in their hear e.

They have surrounded the old town, the largest in our province. Village very like hands mapping mid-level abstraction to higher ones in judgment. This is called humanism, where even evidence is abstraction, as Spinoza places the spider in its web and laughs to banish all but our attention.

Trading eights with Philly Joe an unknotted skein trails across the lounge floor.
She was called Beverly, he McKee. We watched Sugar Ray Robinson unravel against some Boston mediocrity.
Outside pavement cracked. We were drunk again.

So welcome to the farm. Strayed where they found us, we'd an easy picture sleeping, having twice forgotten half the later.
Our wires must be tapped, splicing connections rather than "getting to know" anything. At present I reject the past, at least for the moment. Could anything be half as true?

Innocence, and the struggles of memory atmospheric ideals the sound of writing among language and necessity... except that it's not possible. If it were, it would be anyway. So where has it been?

Villages like rain, the stars were fewer than their fires.
I morn them like a mother.
Amid moments of glory within contentment, reading and being read by landscapes much too near to be unknown passed, imagined difficult it is and does, so no lens requires packaging to raise its boundary.

What went further is the familiar rate of coexistence, once innate but now the domain of myths and disasters persisting here, in the aisles skylines and the beautiful signs of deceit.

Productive avoidance is interpretive not justified, absorbing the most difficult fields, those establishing verity through slander context driving the occupying constant looking through the rear view mirror and seeing that we are not separate.

A walk through winter, belief a smile, wave, attraction and heat, passing reaction restoring my memory.
The literal view is almost useless, really.
Exteriors are shallow.

In the planeless meeting between matter and effect, totalizing states build and destroy in blind eternal instants BOOM — Hey man, what's happening? gravity creating intimate pastimes communication in an infinitesimal leap wrapped in individual circumstances among stranger's experience, memory, thought developing arenas of significant events, imposing worlds whose entire focus of attention is on the integrated whole become "real." We continue the excitation, only with successive replacements, as every story taps and drains its store of the unresolved, the misshapen, the scared.

Either a happy or semi-sweet ending, or just throw up your hands and say "Well, that's life!" giving the impression of "concern," "headway".
The pace of signification and meaning of page-confirming material rapid intervals of information threatening the continued comfortable survival of suburban lawns. Now there'll be action, focused on the smallest possible units.

Radicals conspire, plot, sowing ideas expressly designed to manufacture discontent. "Executives, real estate speculators and corporate boards function without forethought, barring the necessary planning needed to secure and guarantee the continued protection of the public good, whose needs are paramount."

Fools who calculate memory to escape the sting all thoughts lilt, freezing field, open throat to the integral. Knifeblade alley released between imaginations of identity's comfort.
To sleep with the dead? o, I don't mean like that!
I can imagine no truer friend than you and your name is, or has been, unspoken here.

Heavy, warm wind remembered liturgy and history without retort stick hurled, held by wooden hinge which when it returns does not through air both bright and breathed, clasped upon black stones; when we open they arc white.

You, I, these — see rhymes ourselves, power grown out of placement pauperizing research, funding smudged bulbs cartoons of urban out-placement, deported from within and lacking any shelter in mind's own replacement, but these are not whom we imagine we could have been.

Imaginary playmates have been replaced by one way mirrors whose cracked silence passing through speech authenticates it.
If dead lion speaks, the dead will not understand its absent roars a words, but only pain ("Lo pianto stesso li pianger no lascis") not present, nor absent in its displacement.

Pain itself prevents complaint enveloping aromas the area globally, climatically wrapped in social snow, red ice children holding microphones brew storm-bound connectivity gluts before ma-goddess myths of one-no-time origin listed on splintered chalkboards.

They were waiting for me, coming apart while for years a certain self-sufficiency marked with circumspection and also circumscribed in the small, numbered hill town the long arm muscles slackening environs it would be senseless to scribe.

Out of the eggshell a human head retracts the lonely individual make-up man incorrect but justified by simulacra of fire, an ordered world's painted surfaces.
What will replace thought? A dog's head, a concept?
Light on one side of your face, light of permission, loyalty and labor.

Library facade, simple likeness to child.
Begin again and again, washing dishes then copying trigonometric tables on slate.
The no-myth of beginning, the myth of mortality.
We found we could come and go as we pleased, but were content always to hide.

The screen fills with mild weather, a rambling lakeshore cottage.
Propped against its closed door is a worn volume of addresses. Within, son and mother are in conflict about the girl, the future. In another room, the young daughter falls on her sword and explodes in hideous laughter.

The horizon transects her at the height of her fallen bike. She's running among arrondissements, taking the metro; a casual alignment of willowy arm to a fellow passenger's sinewed one, lips speculate. They cling to the shining pole as the car lurches. Meanwhile mother and son leave off complaining to walk a shard and styrofoam shore, gazing downwards, each distracted yet pleased too by the other's presence. That is how it goes, finding a way to the heart of the witness who squeezes his fist through holes in time's pocket.

Leaving here, listening to the TV on the radio, trading gold for teeth, nacreous expression, gist pulling them forward, even you, even last. Given time to choose, choose swaying, to stay this little world of clocks.
I didn't know you were speaking about time like that, as if we were hanging here in space just faces in the rectilinear fog.

Your television bugs me its certitude, its restraint um... uh... ah... huh... wait a min... to be content, just absorbing the buffer a precipitate forming in the exchange of response-like ticks, the mind forges its own signature drop-kicking perceptions of theology and belief preservation in the vaults.

Knowing machines don't know, our desire for infinite growth must measure the absence of infinite space, infinite material.

Violence is golden, your link to the market of an ever-shrinking past.
Remedy for the present, the finite pronounces a sound of breathing refuge of the commensal that it makes good sense to breath.

You mightn't remake yourself keeping all the possible opportunities to press the portable flesh, midnight in the afternoon, shades drawn in our eyes. I never thought of these things until later or have I experienced another event at all?

Here we began and ended like telephones and sleet tangled between the pages of a rectangle, reason sweeps its way through to the end.

And so I went to the movies, finding in the dialogue an unspoken idiom something about singularity, before differentiation, a radiating substance not having time to sort itself out in the cold, the only floor to be known.

You couldn't identify these particles from within, with forces of interest operating as emblems of remorse. Wade in the water children, motherless and bright eyes searching in vital animation circling modest horizons for signs of approaching life.

Isn't this the necessity you wished for?
While beautiful trees of fruit were pulled up by your roots, an interesting condition of involvement, rara avis, the perfect thing you bring me sounds green voice, sounds narrator:

Three months before spring, the snows of inscription lay heavy in the mountains.
We hone the freezing blanket a bed of rime and splinter, cascading through distraction ice like fog, vague difference smothering the most difficult of seasons.

I want to remember what happens to you instinctively trace events in all of the directions bared to interpretation.
Then I will know the naming every street will be renamed the crowds, the angle of light.

In the throwaway sensor staring out at the frozen pier, curious passage onto a white lake of ice, an indistinct passage, reflected atop the discarded lens, train shaken into station, sees me write these words to you.

After a while, once all the ships have landed, sad, said Johnny, slow and slow how a home to desperate nations must grow and head this way — it must be little ones weeping for days, empty pots on cold, cold coals, turns off the sensor, gets up and walks away.

A chord ties end to entrance doubling, troubling hand to self, its long line leaves well alone, new or old, shadow, mouth, word or name, a syndicator stood at my back door today while I whispered, "stay, go 'way."

Do not look at the wineskin, but what is in it. A new wineskin may be cold, eye, heart full of well-aged stone, nightwine, whereas another hand has poured none at all.
Would you say "a fragment is our whole" about Sarajevo's old Jewish cemetery without asking "what's been smashed by whom?" Like smoke above old gravestones, a virtual community "rises from the ground" to side with war.

At a sward where many hovered, every social stone must think: what letters defended, what words ignored.

Urban graveyards, battle scenes, broken pencil points of history stick out like stained fumes and street snow smells.
One eye weeps for the other,
or else what advantage has this world from what we witness, who do not sleep but listen as if we were placed to see words, not just listen to them, to claim what our fragment only represents: Monday morning, laying in bed and thinking itself to know what it wakes? Or else Tuesday, nighttime, raining where we are, or Wednesday, devoted to biography, tracing ten journeys taken of which part I wrote my book in which, friend, you read; it's yours.

Because in tears new literary form swims we feel like crying out: "It serves you right to suffer, write to be alone," 0 generation poured onto these pages.

From overflowing fountain into pitcher full, full pitcher to empty page, your word sounds like snapped cords silver, gold bowl shattered. Flow waters, flow to vespers, all your light, a deck of cards cut in slivers, mother and child drowned in the sand.

Not in shadow, nor in light I want to foretell all that happened to you.
Sweet reason isolate, crying as you walk, pour out both glasses and drink.
Color of a deck of cards.
Fingers snap until night's cord draws its blue track around us, but where shadow and light meet for example, under ground trod, someone walks with your name, a tale told from the teller.

My father and uncle ploughed.
Once life has approached and left, its emblematic particles stalk midday.

The white smoke of occasion lifts itself over the air and history traces back through reasonable displays of great affliction, holding keys on a hook, knowing where what he knows is served best, but that isn't what was said, which is the point, right?

The wet smoke of persuasion deadpans a stock response, saws the richly smoldering walls where living in small towns with great libraries opposes the backhanded curse of "May you live in interesting times."

I know, you'd rather live forever. Me too, without misgiving, reinvigorated in all the customs of air that plague us in our nerve. Interpretation inhabiting the long crest of location in moments of ending that only come once, attended by extension some other one no one other came to meet.

Balancing between a sky full of emblems and ~he ground, all hear all, the song' remembered of this present present's past.
I'm not talking about you, though no one else illuminates theaters like us, whoever we are.

It was a unique moment, one of an infinite stock.
"In each of sixteen markets that we serve, Digital Direct can provide over 100,000 different films, direct to your Home Information Centre." I plugged in the TV but nothing happened.

The last of June Cleaver's kids?
Hey, they hit the ground running smack dab into the brick wall of the 90s.
But at last summer's Job Fair there was talk about careers.
I distinctly remember!
Can you play "Temporary"?

Sensations of self-recognition filter through the sifting field of personalities called "here." Beneath the chatter we are, after all, owners of argument the peculiar distinction for news and analysis some, like many others, have to know is have to be there.

But without looking, again what happened to the details?
Product talks about product is what they never call it.
Hit direct and indirect, a message to the soldiers.

There are many stops between dissimilar histories where episodes have not bled similarly so very many there are but in sum adding up to a common experience people everywhere have had shared between an awareness of memory and an uneasy dream of a fretful sleep.

Experience includes you, which is why it's hard to leave.
Themes of preferred relevance manufacture marketing schemes, illusion the most intangible influence of all bargaining between retake of 10, 15 and 35 second spots.

I know what it feel like looking closely at the grain shorelines awash in the rain.
I have all the desire that little money can buy.

An accurate picture of the inner world finely sifted over seven hundred years of plasticity, invention and pleasure fell to nothing in a day.
As if every few minutes dreams began again, sleep with its fall, its sudden shudder unloosing.

Neither to turn away nor endless to confront what pain
eye — all eyes repeat, organs run hands against redundant grain. Plain clashes in the brain shake off mental chaff, dolor of rites, gradually, the details of time.

Repetition equals change, alternation of voice emerged as silence flint glinting in the pavement as, head down, she walks past the courtyards, buildings where ice tore concrete stairways.
With gentleness, violence peeling back a colorless layer of ash and necessity, children dig dimes from the melting ice beneath the awkward parkbench posture, comfortless Winter cast of open pockets, halting resting where we await out weather's change.

Hungry, unconquerable
I remember setting out the moment my burdens came awake in me dragging my gold watch along the bottom of an ocean rubbing my palm on cloud breasts smiling as I leapt down elevator steps into an atmosphere of trembling seconds balanced like scissors on points which human lips, bitten to blood, withholding a carpet of torture spread by captive sutures across cities where elated we ran, would have some day to make in powerful animal grunts citing names inside a song and speaking another's words in that person's own name. Remember tooth marks not just tongue marks. The tongue marks have changed, the way fingers change in years of writing written, enlarged in romantic grasp.

The self, same, that certainty dissolves — with the same certainty — into decontracted trembling, all matters heading in all directions.
Work cannot be allowed to vanish, for work measures time, takes time expended and pour into its hole unwritten equations: Russian/English, Hebrew/Polish.

Steel and ice of sufficient height to sketch in self-portrait's meter mental being, whose hands touch mountain, and politics — hands on throat.

Rolled out unknown in the hole, Kiki, eighteen what if not human example, what if not tradition? what if now you YOU move upstate and start having a good time in the seasons, for all reasons?
Of course, should not life go on?
Is that life, complete? Eighteen?

Eighteen, no thirty million abandoned kids in Brazil? Are we helpless?
It had been, it was, it is.
Is our social poem/condition a response?
Jasmine, jasper, water's paradisiac sunken climb over darkened heady, polysemic walls filling up our seams as the 20th century gnaws itself in half, a comic book of requisite consumption frantically maintaining "civilization," speed and the shrinkage of lines.

We are the only ones here, us and everybody else on this imported lamp shade distance, scales, seepage making a full range of expression forever more difficult having reduced abundance the limits of duration irrelevant much longer at an ever-changing rate for the next millennium mementoes of souvenirs distinctions, a day in hours media events of the century cogs, reductions, and specializations.

What I am I'm eaten by, this arrangement in a building without walls the sounds of silos foraging in dream time lift anything and it fails falls to arrive, or, had it been there, then gone farther into the flecked distance of structure.
No, of material enunciation one's autonomic autobiography.

Who did you know was here? Me?
I offered you pages, you offered me books lining our sudden visits with dust and the snows of distance and silence regenerating an agency of sound above the earth, mounds of soil pushed up by ice underneath. We were warmer when the currents were conversant, easier counting on the mind's inquiline habitats for an esthetic representation, or fingering the soil for grief sometimes stumbling about in the lobby vacancy and value in the old hotel.

Before travel we rested, waiting for rain to uncover our footsteps. When the time came to distinguish ourselves, we surpassed the view that came with our mss, clearly nothing before us was closing interpretation serving as a mithridate to protect us from relief.

Light has become a fixture here, impressions of newsprint and sound, profile gathering just enough visits to feel warmth and then fixing on the rail music, glaze and telephones the clatter of rhythmic speech far more comfortable the easier it is.

Elsewhere — in perspective — memory becomes a preferred anterior, the leap of place where one rooms or roams, leaving unfortunate tenancy in the cities to the shadows at your feet asphalt road spreading, reeling above ground far underneath eyes, filament, discussion.

What we want when we wanted something more than lip service the heady systems that passion passes on or being an interstitial company against all persistent help.
Hands are patient, and will reinvent themselves in the most spectacular ways, antipode to antipode, 'till a slow slide to fashion redefines what's left unmarked and the useful conditions lost or hidden in the grass are prizes of no value bringing fear and attraction to left and right hand in turn

"kul wachad wadtamiro" and through them to your own skin or to a friend next to you, someone you love who has been patient with your patience with her
"to each his own song of heart" lined up oval extra large like unmarked eggs.

You shed splendor all at once misery of horizons over the days write it down, what happened died while you spoke from memory near the fire. From your notebooks, convolute, inside weakness of memory tell me something, convolute my own mind too —

We who have come to measure want things precise.
Waters rush through pebbles, encircled by friends in public space. Fences are even than its denizens more run-down. Children lightly jump to their feet unaffected by their games.
Great dome, fill with light, amuse us on and on.

What we remember seems authentic. What we forget... well, that's forgotten.
Peace won't come with dull knifeblade to absorb your eye, to cause you to cease asking who you were when you were.
The state has armed these generations for peace.
Their desks circle our chambers.

Remember winter sunlight, harmless? Two birds late, indistinct gripped the ledge milky through the plastic sheet taped o'er window to insulate my back porch.
Because they dig they find worms, downy birds in Winter brush, Eurydice captured in such singer's mouth unto her death: good morning blues, I know what you come for and what you say.

I saw you in the window and I saw you down the way in the alley, on the highway yesterday your split lips spit gravel, hands grabbed for the curb 'til I took you in my arms f'your new book I wrote the blurb and, fool for wounded charms, ate your bloody glow.

What a funny way to talk.
One more such word & I'll turn upon your world chaos, void, scrambled letters, chairs in circles, people all alone to tear monotonous periscopes.

From a desk facing me, a man looks up.
Give me your glass skin to use.
"Why have you ascended here?"
"To dot the i, dance on it too — cross the t and twirl it!" His thoughts, I see, make him grin.
"Long ago my house burned down while my eyes were shut, and I couldn't see it so I no longer go home at day's end. Instead I simply shut my eyes wherever I am. This act of removal seems to do the trick. I sleep in the house, on the hand, at sea, on the land.

Oh no, this is not enough."

Do you live in a house for pleasure only?
My house houses others too.
Do you tell me to build yet another house?
No one can build more than one.
I've known none, built even one.
Would I then command you two?
Deliver yourself to it.

It's like this; if I'm to weep I'll do it in a place you cannot visit.
To weep before you would only confirm your arrogance, your heedlessness.
It would confirm in your mind my needlessness.
Come with me, visit my house, my burned-down house.
I built it for you, and you died inside it.

In Hebron, patriarchs and matriarchs wake and see their children slaughtered.
Stand at this riverbank of words. Say your name.
Exhort yourself to rise, rise!
Did you triumph in youth to fail in old age?
In Sarajevo, it's hard to sleep. They shell my graves, mortars lay all up and down my breast.

There's little solace in the raising of hands necessary as it is the privilege to look away may be the bitter ticket I'm waiting for the train now I'm scanning the horizon for the perfect place to see.

Here are the fragments as I found them, among enthusiastic features are qualities of children and the condemned whose attending morphemic alliances and romantic attachments w detail stand occupying focus return these scraps to places well known to them, the owning owners in an integral cascade of years my country is beautiful we lived and lived, here always.

Our mothers did not birth us to fill the earth early with the early dead to regard all things as straw.

A continuing awareness of gunfire though we never noticed it or never seemed to notice the bridge, now free of snipers the language we are tracing here where there's no risk of death speech continues, and the ways we have remain.

Millenarianism
and in the distance, a dream.
In the thousandth year the sun shone all day and all night. Wherever martyr had died, or saints prayed, angels would appear.
Birds gathered in the sky, and animals spoke.
It's common knowledge, I know it to be true.

To be standing in line, with the lime of lists stilled in conversation, we are not consumed understanding usefulness in articulate manifest scarcity as though we are consuming in cork, floating on the earth perfect among individuality an orrery, and the world the night's last night, admission indulgence, and a blushing of the extreme release you feel with the entrance slipping past the arbor of your sight.

Theaters, then, and the calm order that wraps us in arms children breaking the surface breathing inwardly, and carried in the stream.

I followed this far, but they'll be no further complicity, or spoon-fed resettlement with mounds of earth underfoot.
There is no one observing this fete, standing in welcome at the door, calling out the names.

Autonomous, I've left out identity areas smoldering in columns of chalk afterhours radio playing clarinet in a watery gloom.
What Chanel are you on? 5?
I have a photograph, a sequence of seas falling headlong into the perfect waves of a long desired method.

It's what your thought does to drive the zone shouldering flowers past their very own breath in the air.
The threads covering us were made distanced, halfway between obscurity and velocity, breaking rocks to sandstone these building's airy soil.

The cities have embraced us growing live among themselves while policy rages in everyone else I lock and bolt the doorway-bearing entrance walk out at home into an unheroic pedestrian vocation transport, and occupying symbols for the elegant detailing of necessary reflections, teaming our biology with valuable systems, in charge of all hunger vending rackets with conceptions describing the distant history of our conduits for postage and delivery of relief.

Quickly I lick envelope, post this message through closed door, open window dotted rainy vector day then slide my membranous pseudo-pod along its limits awaiting injection's knocking at the door. Suburbs slide by beneath my weight, and I fall.

I have had so little time to consider your request which at first I did not note enthusiastically or so the answer unrolled falling from the brick wall recently painted from which sighing turned away.

As if stepping out of doors again everything spoke as well you and I would talk amid budded spikes — spring branch — tracery of subcode stripped — we'd have fell into easy side-by-side stride who could not bear your loss now would not now live without you such words one reads not knowing what they mean. I walked up from the beach to town to our shared office. I began to write down what I heard you say about me the list grows long. The pages fill and fall. For days I sat on the sofa, remote control in my hand, and turned our media to dust.

There was a red that meant to alert notice another merely indicated the device was turned on, a third rose or fell, slightly trailing a musical peak or hush. And my pen was red my pen was in pursuit of a heedless man in whose hurried wake a swamp had risen edging the town.

Muddy paths, weedy and scarlet-edged, shapelessly mirrored puddles, maplike yet placeless each concealing him or else his cousin, or he will not contest with you his place (is) at the margin looking onto depraved central concav'ties and the columns, pediments putti that had such meanings as he supplements with such other meanings as are forced on him to wish uncertainties he has known in preference wobbling into the pivot as a slim woman or a slenderer man whose elegant curvature maintains the painted dome where 'neath an image of angelic disarray — Recoiling Fearful Woman,

Palms Pressed Against Your Temples, Whose Hands Seem To Hide You From Some Unwelcome New Presence, Rampant, Rapist And The Scroll Slips From Your Lap, Capital Overturned, Tumbles At Your Feet — whose label reads "Judea" he sits, rereading Midrash: Lamentations.

But there is no center no margin you say as you spread to cover it, beginning your description by characterizing her position in society and her large and gracious form detailing her friends, her lover the dentist, who "knew how nor to appear," only then turning to speak of individual things her character affirms, and these too reveal in exception and in rule the strange half-light half-life, shade edging across features, as its line travels the length of her living room staining her long leg and the man's mid-section threatening to embarrass his costume which, however finely made and of whatever quality cut, must have fit the young man he had been the day it was basted to his mirrored form better than the middle-aged man he now was.

Not that she cared for all that.
She did not. To be near him in what was left of their lives sufficed, as it did him too.
He found his books in her attic, rememb'ring the evening he thought: "Tomorrow too late, start earning your memories."

It's reached past a keen veil and loosed with anvil and twine the sweeping, bereft seconds seam's unspoken consequence shearing the ticking sound of counsels in battens and sheets filling a late fever with a puzzling clue.

The mereness of irony doesn't weight, much dependent on what you mean, or did you, here.... We went back to the hotel, I followed her into a dream, the drama which we'd enunciated without thought, other than everything entailed in everything else we'd won, peopled by ghosts spectacles in alleys, besides living inside, motion of the residue astride in likely buildings, handles a warm prisoner, engineer after the design.

You can't put your hand through nothing I breathed the cool, white air (in places out of practice) is everything I can't hold and all that's left without it or have I said that before?

The sum, declared at borders perhaps what's fully cogent unfamiliar-remembered, doing what I think I know, doing what you and together, close between the fine lines in her small shadows, drifted and rekindled.

I've done with what I'm doing as any craft can, I can and varieties to go on, to take it a sudden leap from the cold emersion couldn't loose such a precious thing a persistent gain in the fostered passion.

But I've too many to plan now, too many to repeat any lack of luster because of a brow, or unhinged Übermünchen flapping the breeze.
"You're almost there," the character said. "There where?"
which I suppose is the right answer, though.

The visitors came and stayed, then went away straying hours in the clover. In a few days disarming in their sounding shouldering the hurt (too easy, really). There' no point to it, a shell dropped from the barest mold of realism.
Sometimes the contract has its way with you, eyes the splintering, rapidly reduced background you'll never be the same, continue on unaffected. Well, its just a mystery something we can imagine like fossil invertebrates pull up some beach my lover, and together we'll squander our life in sand.

Unfocusing the risks, and other than this our heretical flag the day was married, completing one flame between you, swerving past a candle.
Ever else, collapsed in the right situation to aspire, what happens what's missing, tell me how it is you don't know (with a turn, a kit of gloves) it's a prior condition clearly, where else could it be?

Climbing a cynical ridge the letters always add up (a different sort of scrabble) falling, drinking in the air wherever you desire we belong, wherever you belong, wherever desire belong to you. The present is the perfect rebuttal and is the easiest to apply. The past is completed before the plaster has dried; paddle up to the analogy and go participant, expatriate, retreating unconditional, express how beautiful the shade is and the wall, how beautiful drawn on the agenda in declination touching palms, psalms, the lasting content of the finest plumbs each vine leaf, cupping immensity of light explosion of display, locating children in band music, colonial officials giggling, resilient sadness, retired sailors, prostitutes, thumbs-up people of vast enthusiasm's cruelty cut stone-rope style.

With this thought in mind she falls easily to her haunches, opens her hand.
Three fossil shells tumble out onto the thin cloth weighted to the sidewalk with stones. The cloth's corners turn under the stones. Where are you from?
she asks me; sand, a few grains, cling to her palms.

From a hotel room where curtained life borrows a few pennies, each namesake trying as the drama of the trauma dream from where aging men, slight through shoulders and hands, slackly thick at hip and foot, knock'em back to cover lunch and shoeshine, from where he'll wait out brightness 'til dusk covers squares with shadows & people.

From where she sits, slim, stylish, sensuous, old. Hand on leg, eyes omnivore, fingers ringless, her shadowed agenda still untended, she remembers:
days, years, decades pass — lifetimes.

When the poet died, in nineteen thirty five she'd have been no more than ten.
All the same, they might have met, having both been born into good families.
She'd have held her breath, drinking her glass of summer juice, as he, at her side, inhaled her spirit essence, really pretended that what was real was real, painted on us by a hand in hiding, something we feel may be expressed, but no, we only expressed your feeling, the square empty, the light wind lifting yesterday's newspapers.

Thinking we were alone while pretending reality, you surrounded us. I am happy enough seated in the very spot where jagged swath, broken glass, chair legs spread to hold my weight.

The waiter pauses, smiling at the patrons' odd requests.

In these still pictures that lead me through I follow my own as well, pale and obsessed mad drawings you've returned; however slightly I knew you gave me such satisfaction very like the fellowship one senses with the unknown, the dead, the past — silent stentors, perfect standards bent to be linear, available to guide you into quantities: root and rose waiting for wit to replace logic with luck, sweet time and light and stillness bubbling with work as If to dance on it, as if it's pavement so much at least we expect from a mirror, a semblance of thought, again the waiter paused; a troupe of players impersonating twins large-grown children fall'n in love, what used to be said of him: he had no heart, his sinew was really bone.

No one knew what to tell him.
In darkness his room enlarged.

Volunteers, and one conscripted to the earth,
"wherever it is you stand, between shadows, remote, dreamed on by someone," your answering voice is of a master who appeared in me suddenly, as if a plant, admiring the too-turned earth, had begun to grow from it.

No ray, no water, no outline, no desire slowly pulls road from shoulders but a yellow line, big stones.
Accidents uncaptured in their distant speed chorus and chorus; we lean over the plant to listen, to heed. "Unfurl," flower says. And its root dives.

A periodic codex a parcel of air, partial divides, divers alley ways for whom the moon's woo, wounds for substitution. I've fallen, seeing you; this, mistress, and how you treat me so bawdily... the holding of a foreground in the lap of luxury tangential cradle rocking the mocking of respective grief, just as long as its hands pass through into meaning. Something, anything.

Outside, another invasion mounts the sea.
The cooling world, necrose making this an effort of necromancy, collaboration... a sense of betrayal? cholera of the ascending century's vague, incremental wasting.

One day her shaved head, one day the day you must give her up a single hour, one companion one chance.

It's there in the morning. It's very quiet.
Something is hurting someone, an inscription an overwhelming shudder, when too much is not enough a profiting, void, a dance AIDS, a plague also of the politic in heaving over again the midden smell of profit.

Earning, making a way within a lattice, a sea of green comforting, suturing, surfing on the risks self-replicating sanctions of criminality makes it easier exempting life, well, you know what it is to be persuaded t to participate endure, reflect and pleasantly resolve to feel less fear under any circumstances, at any expense.

Julio y Septiembre

whose months these are, to that does this year belong in its heavy, oiled rags.

I'm in love with a woman who holds the night between two pale fingers fixing the most exact of retributions like the loss of a first born or another early death it happens every day, happens only once setting out only to arrive, like the face that she fails to describe as difficult as nacre, as varied and beautiful.

It is here, at this point, that we set to work cabling ahead to the next town, sketching out an itinerant destination of distraction, understood habit, preference for sharpness, delight, release.

See, the shadows that fall through the cracks below.
Falling, drinking, falling, in the space between us, them, the crowded grasses the art of witnessing, after all we've done this is the tail of a trail, and so the trail of a trellis.

The recent drug-sweeps in Berkeley, rounding up many dozens of people, is something not opposed by the Left of the Bay Area.
Happening within People's Park, where for years the police have routinely told street dealers "take it to the Park, or else we'll bust your ass" giving, then, good reason for drug sweeps and, then, an incremental increase in the martial command of society.

Anything for the War on (some) Drugs, anything at all.
A piece of poison, and then a piece of pie.
It sounds like I'm saying martian command, huh... and maybe that's more to the point, alien.

Bur I can't excise specific sample of human behavior on a whim, no matter how good an argument could be made for it.
It sounds like a nursery rhyme.
First a Piece of Poison, and Then a Piece of Pie! First a Piece of Poison, and Then a Piece of Pie-ie!

The king of chance walked uphill heading for my residence.
I stood, his eye upon me, amid a thousand shadows of days better than a thousand other days a stranger in my pursuit, asking, ready to receive.

What did we consider? What leaves us unthought?
Buildings cur against a sky, their fanciful, plastic-light-filled, red-lettered signs call for action, call for response, a circuit backed up, an ungrounded transformer lightly buzzing, this we have left for undone throwing its slight heat over the knot of people gathered in a basement around a shellac-odored warm spot, alternately silent and absorbed a point where, unavailing, public boundaries prevail over silent partners that give to rebound.

"At the long desk's shapely arch he sits in his hopeless march.
He looks out the window; he sees in the park what thought's mirror shaped as dark bushes, in their final lurch dislodging a pair at lark.
Such wings do, to make their mark."

"The edge of the platform glows just before a train arrives.
We range behind lighted dots, single-routed, silent, many destinationed, riding in its one track as purposeful paralyzed as a person filled up with artificial light & questions."

Hours you spend writing such words will return as years in heaven, every year a stranger come to dominate, afflict subjugate you. Yet, the hours you spend writing these words will return as years in heaven where a pinpoint sky of stars will melt your glass.

If the year you were born, surrounded by fire and blood and death, sent you on to this one, to this friendship with the sky you undersit like a child beneath the dining room table who sees the table legs and his parents' legs, who are supporting it all, then you wear the outer edge of our exile, where state and space merge as one hundred twenty cycle hum in a basement transformer, where time strums in disjunct sign, and you look out the small window at these few spirits clothed in the bodies of your dead friends.

"Those who are left must keep all we left to achieve same ends in borrowed light looking out small windows at small stars they borrow from space around them, like an army marching in sequence, not en masse, whose glory is a rented aureole," one stops to say.

"Wrapped the stash in camel packs buried it near mailboxes with vid-dots and ray alarms to clue me in when the porous reed will sing like a human snail, lips sneaking up on me no, on. you, like a verb ending sneakily changing to fit round my neck," he continues.

"Gladly they kill family with poverty serial ignorance works a minim wage the mind makes its menu like squid is deep-fried all these bluff folks out to lunch on each other do not require forces of authority to sing past their borders. Under arrest, they lay dreaming."

"Sinew too must intention be," I reply to that friend, for I loved him while alive, and no less now he's left our shade for heav'n-sun's, malleable timelong home.
"Remember your mechanics, sinew to bone," he laughs at me; "tense your muscles, lift and give."

I'll look and find, then and there my thoughts, and on my cassock with a furthering of sight, is this what it is?, revers in the fading, growing light.
The concern demanded, deep as the mountains where you look up and out, rises seeming so diffident, but the rock at your feet, each one there beneath you in the dust, in the mountain's stare in the longing you've satisfied, breaking the streams of catastrophe by building them.

I know what's troubling you.
What you see is what you got.
Or not. Either way you're screwed.

Many people obsess about their status, a habitat of smiling, facile graces and alliances, servitude and assets that are called upon, and then provided for.
But this is ordinary;
it's the effect's scale that's critical.
Do I owe you, say, a share of my dinner or shares in the interest accruing on Latin America's zillion dollar debt?

Machine gun fire is so very final, that it pays to be alert.
But here's how to ace the con: refuse to look where you are expected to.
No adjustment of your set is possible.

You enter, and this integrates distinctions shifting and agreeable beneath a dome, a crowned hall the air rising about you awakening without memory, lucid absorption of irreconcilable states multiple but unique singletons assuring the duration of fleeting continuance.

So I walked back to the truck put my hand on the chromed handle catapulting me into the next town, past the afternoon, then the humming in my eyes and another screen door slams asleep, in the paradox.

Here in country, action is the other's job, to sit and stare without direction being the height of fancy. No more vicious club joins us with our sisters and sons.
What's it about us 'merkins?
Do we have oat straw in our veins, easily swept in whatever direction the wind blows?

I walked over the Golden Gate late last night, from San Francisco to Marin, over the deep gorge cut in the rock of Nova Albion by the erosion of the Sacramento river long before the oceans rose to fill the bay.
The moon was bright, the cliffs were bright, and the sky...

A close look at Haiti, and you'll find a poignant history of the real results of Imperial Attentions, a country whose original population was crushed, now blood-drained and beyond hope anything, even a us invasion, is better. First a piece of poison, and then.

Either the invasion is morally just, or the us has strategic interests; the invasions will come, and the grateful people will be liberated, to resume their work as slave labor for transnational companies, death to death to death to death, Clinton's status will be raised...

"Oh, do not forsake me, my indolent friends hear my song of imperative, and the absurd, uncriticised rightness of brute force, used because the power of brute force destroys." Lenny Bruce and Phill Ochs were hounded to their graves for saying these things. Now? No problem, write whatever the fuck you want.

They're not afraid of words, not words. Rather, it's effectiveness which bridles their ire. So, write whatever you want. You're safe as long as what you write has no effect. 'Tis true. Spicer is right. No one listens to poetry.
Well, not no one exactly...
I'm here, I guess. Or is it you? I don't know.

Walk no freedom only daze to turn within?
Climbing whiter in heads, but they don't see you akimbo my courtyard wall oh lovely friend to all world my beloved friendly world I walk arm in arm with your animal self thru wall and window, both square.

Must be breath, made to wander, that don't want to save the world.
Yet when a hot breath of mime left it strayed among us, heard "please don't squeeze me; I don't want to be no pearl!" your voice, as if still here you'd come to calculate the end: kiss all the girls, look down grimly at your book.

In a possible geometry our gazes still meet though we look apart, where leaves fall into unnoticed embraces animate facts of hair, skinned symphony of European rights of man mouth closed, glumly chewing gum.

What if it were different, square with edges trimmed away?
A tracery of indications falling from your ears, decorated intentions, chamber music gone to silence. Courtyard from a shadowed room colonnades too white to see.

The servant speaks for the masses, his father too bore only slaves. Just slaves.
The poet notes a gauzy imperium love's narcissism, bookshelves in lit alcove indicted in each and every volume abandoned in scenes she writes, even those where the god ascends our senses.

Taking and striking, she is bent to her notes.
Like patient minds, they descend, they listen to fruit tree trunk strain to balance laden head.
Earlier, we'd salted the sea with our tears now we chalk out our ritual of virtue squatting on the pavement, eyelids falling closed.

The election is a room.
The candidate a glaring lamp, dollar watts.
Closed door, the public is trapped.
A revolution is a switch on a wall that must be there before e'er it can be thrown. An air of welcome darkness a magic touch do not touch.

Human brilliance flooding me from each his word I hear my friend say "I must be lost somewhere" he cannot find solitude, always alone ever welcome, something he has inside him an epoxy drilled, a shaft a head, a grip, gravity at center, the work you do.

The larger the desk, the smaller the circle of whom I will say, these lives show me how community and person fit.
Are a few such friends (ex-friends?) sufficient, for whom form is a human right and not just a metaphor?
An abandonment memory will prevent?

Who is the character of the present: the tall, bullet-headed security guard at the metal detector in the hallway of the darkened national library floor swearing that he's used to it?
Dreaming of table saw models, which to buy?
Or I? Is it you and I?

How hopeful the new entrant scanned the room to find his place.
How thoughtful the new desks sat each a shackled sphere of spheres.
Oh he feels himself in decline now, no doubt.
Can't think of his words, can't find streetcorner crossings no more.

A body of water looks like a cupped hand.
A hand flat down is the dust.
In my heart I still hear Jackie Wilson sing
"The ocean is the ocean; a tree's a tree.
'T wants 'you' to be with 'we.'" Inside of his fervid thoughts, one more icon dies each day.

If so, teach me how to guard our silence from an alien ear, how keep silent in moan and shout: "Maybe you are blue, but you don't mind, 'cause you know way down the line you'll talk out time's ineluctable decrease sow the seed, your days will cease." Which is "We," not "Jackie," see?

The personal is an interpretation, and interpretations are inherently enriched by their horizons limited by their reliefs lines of pockets at the borders, cadences of the past lived in its presentary state.
I only now know what I knew then, this place, occupied entirely by attention.

Ignore alien orders.
Which shouldn't be so hard, considering we're among a self-created taxonomy we of the great metal rose that sings birds, only we forgot they are birds that grasp, and never knowing the weight of it or on the page, as certain as the colors of the sky that will touch you in a handful of water.

So why refuse the face of another's dream why conflate the sated, full in every world while moving through the traffic (here's your hat what's your hurry?!)

The finest designs are the most obvious the coupled ladder, the armor that greets us relatively elevated, and muttered.
What are you waiting for, anyway? Your mind?
I'm not familiar with who you refer to, who listens. I'm not yet sure where to go, but Its a great place to visit.

All day and all night the river flows through the valley, never growing tired of its course.
Is this considered failure?
Gaols and chattel, the fetid trains through wheat fields past which there can be no poem written again and again the final reasons, the final discourse, the final final last and only chance to ride to the top of the spheres only knowbody told you, you were expected to know, relied upon given credit for the native faculties necessary for success, the all-shiny looming glittery above.

While summer fits in the cracks and the places underfoot above flicker with brief vacations from their own perfect worlds, sunning the blue-sky waters with threads of imagination, also more visceral circumstances, a cultural Ebola, a level four crash and bleed out, the social equivalence of exsanguination Kitum cave and the migration of Marburg first contact, and libraries of libraries filled with reasonable doubt.

We who must suffer beg your forgiveness, for having the need to bleed when you cut us.

We who must suffer ask your indulgence, for breathing the air which we need to sustain us.
Where else should we begin? If it's not broken, you're not trying hard enough the binary test of all possible worlds the countervailing balance.

Cute trick: freed of all responsibility, while obtaining maximum benefit from a sinecure aura of concern, leave the debris behind for the foreigners, the frail who're free then to pursue whatever they want.
Survival's where there's so much to wish for, on the level playing field of 21st century economics.

It's not my fault that you're empty inside. You'll just have to live with it. Which, if recognized has the effect of reinventing the field reentering the world at cross-purposes through the whole of material and content even if only to just stand there, rolling a needle down a silk thread gonna leave this, lonesome place....

It's the afternoon charge, to lead your way back to the steps, and watch the sun filter through the trees, collegiality is all the pay off you'll need but you're not aware of that.

Perhaps if I take your hand you'll understand and guide the point of your pen-flow, its rapt inattention — even empty space — resounds with a way out.
So I would enarm you, friend with uncertain attentions, and my ladder seek ramparts to lean against, your wall to climb.

The birds' racketing shout in the flaming trees; working out for their imminent take-off south, unending experiments, patterns to match, patterns create, while you gaze upwards, watching from within your Schubertian sun-glassed eyes, eager shudders fill your touch.

Clouds have a jerky waltzing edge-move today immortal revolutions say, whose unfading enthusiasm for change moving in admiration even one who lived after death; Victor Serge obliquely curving, as arms move to embrace love of red, love of shadow tear at flesh: this is not interpretation.

My hand slides behind the page and turns, leans on the table, hands in pockets, wearing a green jacket zipped to the top, his jeans turned in large folded cuffs jaw muscles flexing unconscious I believe he grasps his worn-in-out briefcase full of notes quitting the library for other front lines.

Must we have both careless and careful models a helpless shaking hammer ethnicity rejected in favor of an elective adventure deep into the (concept of) wildernessextruded freezed food-foam, and write till earth is but a name, as John Clare put it? In a path that can be changed, the past chained to evident unspeakable versions of a better world we carry 'til we drop, dissatisfied with others' efforts, our own allowed to drop from their bough.

Perhaps in an emblem of preparation, when visitors arrive, vague, dense as shadows, I set my household to preparing their meal.
This shows me ready for them.
But I, your brother, am uncovenanted; when they visit me, it's all I can do to bake a few unleavened cakes.

Ebony, silver, reed, tongue, a capella flangeless, bored through, engineered with no entering angles, and when I hand it to you and there is nothing for you to do with it is this considered success?
We must find reason again.

How many streams have flowed into my cupped palms refreshing dark sky lights clouds if any one has known such turned circuits empty kettle drum resounding in the field who has set up to strike it?
Prismatic, refractive smudge happy, if only empty.

"Enslaved to your treasury, marked return once again to unknown sender, we contrived to grow long a single blue hair.
From all our mastered studies this only did we retain:
reach forward with your hand, and bend at the waist.
Flex knees a lot or little—it all depends."

Surely, what has been lost can also be found.
Can be made never yet to appear expatriate or exile?
Both outer and inner style merge but not until emerged a weighed down swaying as of autumn bird/branch can one equate one's difficulty with pain.

There we lie dreaming in trees clear our throats repeatedly while the mail, wrapped in vinyl sings low, a song of discards rising in an instant crush to claim our inattention.
We wonder when to take off.

Whatever else the returns, arriving pointblank and shredded in the mud a watery field can't help but foster regret, at least in those who tear the blue-green riparian ribbons from the rapidly descended, warm steel shell.

Here we are and shall remain after a time, for awhile.
Everything survives its end: TV shows, cigarette filters, passionate features bumping against the wet breath of morn, an old cracked tea pot, some cabbage leaves, and the odd tin of jam that's long ago been emptied these detachments of silence bringing us to our senses.

Don't take it so seriously, the way to ruin a moment. Countlessly, our ears will do the measuring even when our fingers can't. Pattern, coherence, design struggle to violate the lack of control talismans, antivirals, and fetishes work as well as anything, but differently.

You can't fight a virus like the evil eye, and the skills needed to survive and sustain a slow role in a Carolinian lake haven't yet been discovered. How easy the antigen. An imaginary black man is a current favorite.

Irish, Jew, Gay, Socialist will do in other contexts.
Caution: may cause drowsiness.
Use only as directed.
If you still scream out after you know that there's nothing to fear, does the stick become a snake?

Does the snake become a tear?
As music deploys itself, running into the airless air, the sterile ground, a dark night carves a ditch in the earth, and in a rush of confidence pours down the blood of a ram, shades in the form of mirrors mirrors in the form of fears trying to cure a hangnail by cutting off someone's hand stop the tide from advancing absolute certainty, like the unrecognized belief in an impossible world.

It's quaint, I suppose, until they drop by to inform you that you don't ... quite ... have it ... right.
A solution to the problem: policies.
Section 1, Paragraph 5:
"Thes clemly dimpt resam, arl musen aps grends." You'll want to cede... good for country... lots'a cash... preborn family values ... more guns ... lock 'em up.

Ritually kissed on both cheeks, resistance, the painted lips falling away from the faces the multi-lingual screams, like a flag that waves the frightened, decaying splendor around us where we still, somehow, construct the fragrant, fertile streams of language and youth never forgetting, in the new century who is the hunter, and who is the hunted; where the fear is drawn, and whose picture it is;

who are spoken with, and who are spoken to;
whose life rises, and whose life falls to the floor; what is acceptable, and who accepts it; who can hear, and who listens as though speaking.

And there's the insurmountable irony... after taking everything to never have it, empty as a cracked shell try and figure that one, huh.
The cracks become avenues, the avenues become worlds, whose impact can be surmised from the distant echoes of carpet bombing and explosive denials the natural born illegal aliens designed to destroy vision, memory, understanding, history, and any other context-driven antidote.

Well, we know what we want, right?
And we know how to get it.

One day written, next day sealed.
Eventually I turn my face away while history rolls up and over my heels like fictional hands closing on a victim who's found marginal escape, lies crushed, progeny and mate in tears. Under blue light, laughs.

Only a few weeks before he disappeared he spent time classifying beautiful morning of erect denial evening paw licks the sky.
In an hour I'll do something to disturb, even overturn, every quotidian density.

In which case, to what place will he be removed?
There are four themes in our work pieces relentlessly moved from the puzzle that looking up from one's desk are what we see: each other there to describe as oneself startlingly come upon, helplessly welded to insight, banality and strict habits of research undertaken without knowing how each would arrive, constant faithful to the point that must be made, while not tripping on footprints that were our previous present tense.

Avoidance too do we clasp.

Many and wonderful are her thoughts of us, painting on canvas distance walking through the room where we sit together to break our Nikons into symbolism to flirt with fake icons, hardened as if pain nameless in needed joints.

The time she came from all things were allowed, that are not now.
Wars fought in chilly retrospect or mental time's alien devotion.
Standing by my window on a cloudy day I see a self shout aloud.
I wonder where she is, where is she going?

her arms full of blues stanzas, propelled enclosures, collected not dispersed?
Is this what we have become, our products visible, next to each other in some meaningless way? Do you sense yourself fall toward the footnotes, where iconoclasts meet again?

Fingers press a leave in Rome and in Jerusalem teeth fall out, flowers wither, a great debt is built, a snake feels outdone again and man and woman lean outward, maintaining their arch in space, as it leads to an open silent place where you and I get results, get to know each other. Cigarettes vanish from the ashtray, sucked down by righteousness. Like physical memory or a mirror common sense forces reach you as facts from which you must fly.

What is there to perfect other than yourself, arranging the objects on your desk or in your room — yet, they vanish, new ones appear to be dusted between more pressing projects.
Look, the book slides into a spot on the shelf.
Or must I find you instead fallen among my intentions like rubble or an hourglass that keeps asking to be turned, a mental geometry where ev'ry location is a border too?

Between one person and another figures a third witness approaching to remind us when the future arrives as words spoken by someone else what sympathies ruled the hunt what we heard in confidence, and soon forgot whose tongue turned then, or was stopped, words slurred, gait canted, spirit spinning awry, that it's not our life to rise nor ours to fall. Not to listen. Not to speak.

Estrin's right: Rome is a Mobile Home, touring the centuries. Go ask the Tainos, who greeted Columbo that fine and fettle day.
But what were you thinking of?
Did you think I'd just disappear?
No, my correspondent. Is is what it is, and I wouldn't deny that.

I'm just resting, hoping to remember it.
It's raining again. I guess it's been a year.
It's so cold here, hard and hungry, thin, bitter no bounty too perfect to go unnoticed.
We only survive by the thinnest of threads.
"Oh, I want to live so bad," he said, with the mountain exploding behind.

Then after the fire, sweet the rain washes it away.
Simple, isn't it? Seeing you, the glimmer washed inside, the rain enveloping me cannot reflect it at all.
To give, things we are given are never separated. So how can we fear to fear? Or misplace what we've been living?

So after the fire love, warm ourselves in the hollows the ashes that we have filled after time, and the pleasures here, alight where we are now.

Each loss is an object, like Coastanoan basket craft. For eons renowned for their skill and beauty, only three examples remain the art gone with the people.
I have so many questions.
When we broke in exhaustion he toasted "To Renewal!"

holding his hand above him.
Where do mosquito fish go in the winter?
What evidence exists, of things which no one alive knows anything of?
If I own a basket, what do I possess?
I heard you read in a store filled with dead things, but that's ok, not your fault.

I can't exempt myself from my own critique, anymore than I can free myself from the corporate spinning sweatshops and starvation assembly units. I mean, I shop in that Supermarket to the World write with power supplied by PG & E pay taxes for death squads in Guatemala.

I can offer no adequate exclusions; we all live with the same lie, breathe in the same atmosphere.
So it becomes a question of participation and resistance, or simply participation.
I most heartily recommend the former.

I needn't explain why, yes?
Disaffection is a most terrible act.
It warms the arthropodan gels of the cool, chilled monster inside us all.
Scissors, paper, rock... measuring the castles where we build sand, infernos fired the heat of fire scarcity built with style built to last, separating out the lumpen.

At night, when we dream, what time do we dream in?
The future? The past is still here, the present is always getting away.
Maybe we dream in all three, coming together in sleep.

It's all part, even the antithetical though what's not has to play too, making it and being there.
Never, I couldn't or wouldn't regret it immense, white nights by the lakes mesmerizing stream, speaking about something to be dreamed.

Is the world still glowing?
Is the night still making rounds?
Is something still pushing up ahead of us, whittling out the unimaginable?
I sit here and sip my tea the most ordinary act I can think of, moon spinning 'round my body.

Although what's not must play too (flipping pages of urgent warnings & dire predictions — excellent advice that arrives too late to be of use), the waves crashing around our feet will not let us stand at any shore, beyond where dead things suck watered bubbles through the sand.

Turn and turn it; everything is in it.
Bridge made of cracked glass whose edge defies you to cross. Winter, copying in your notebook the recipe for a color long unseen amid objects glinting on your desk. Yet, know: its color may still appear.

Like participation, perhaps resistance has been forced upon us too.
A double imperial eagle, painted on the synagogue ceiling at Hodorov in seventeen sixty four, nods to power. The hare caught in its talons pictures power's consequence.

Germans burnt down Hodorov's old synagogue to the ground; did the hare escape? A hare draped o'er the hunter's shoulder, yet Esau was denied his patrimony, slumped before the fire and died.
Hare and hunting dog alike, eaten by hawks.

Strange instruments have pieced us together in an arduous, cursory course — absent sensoria that listen in on an unending escape.
Blood in ears, we hear a sound, we pause. Bounding through grass, we perfect our misplaced bounty.

It's been heard so many times, so many ways... ok we'll say it then in this way. Its only been a hundred and fifty years or so ago a period of time that will in fact pass again I'm sure, in some manner of speaking.
Somebody will be reading something somewhere and that's saying something, no?

Here, things continue to slip back together though in a different configuration.
I want to be like a TV character though I haven't given it a lot of thought.
I fall in Jove in my sleep with women I know, but know I'll never meet.

With a sound intelligence, and the right environment you can survive anything yeah right, bub. Wanna buy a bridge, between here and there perhaps? I wonder what the fare is m probabilities, one's capacity of survival, in the mind.

I found an empty bag at my door, a gift of myself, an accident a movement of my body picking it up, finding what I'd never lost.
It seems reasonable to wonder about the speaker, if you ask me present thought, future hearer somewhere a thought between them.

We still drink our wine here, and for good reason or drank it, I can't keep it straight anymore who is speaking what to whom.
I'm not copping out; I'd really like some mail through the pulsating gasses of this screen, or maybe we already are.

"There" was exile; air was cool, but Jay outside the walls, an instant revived not by, nor in, memory, not certainty but plain luck that lets us speak.
An aberrant warmth has fooled the buds, teased them out onto tree branches; now they must die. Crocus that pushed through last week's softened ground this week's cold withers.

We too, constant enough to say our goodbyes without knowing whom we touch or what future, uprooted and broken, will calm the greedy arrogance of our gene pool, we pull tree from ground and put pencil to page.
We crush the arrogant kingdom in our days, a shopping cart world, beneath a duct tape sky.

Hopelessly in love forever and always we've never had much resistance to crushing except in aggregate, already between the two of them, soft and hard and then in uninterrupted whispering displacing the binary, or including them. We've given our goodbyes.

At some point, the screen goes blank absence waxing a discussion, the new moon here, patiently somewhere else, or just waiting.
I take a breath by my own intervention, and then forget, continue.
I didn't know where that was until, handing it to you, I decided to tell the simple truth & instantly fell silent, a voice swelling in broken regular song.

Do you think "something went wrong" or right? Just one way to write, in ink powdered of pounded or borrowed bones.
