from gallery by engine gallery by loose window pulled up inside above you witness smooth Los Angeles: step, tangent and brush. empty building till you in it, nobody. and white new connect new spray new squall to move on these steps and pin, rose and draw, circle round the edge of your cruised and inscribed inside city, your citywalk and promenade or palisades, the turning sunset whose people is all you see in pretty mute offramps overflowered hoods dawn malls.

I wouldn't try to tell my mama's story and all its edges' rip or field brown purplehull packed rooms and casinos 'cep for that lesting presen moan shell different Monday afternoon. Jerry Doggett fire iron click curl while ma was working. you got to go from Reely Phillips to Lamar LeFebvre every day and quarterly conference to you know you got to cut a motherfucker with delight even if you don't get that edge to get to what ma would tell like reconstruction.

cruising sounds at the truck stop on the bus, get on, get down, ge down get off baby. like marking and box make klinerolls and stick write dive! sound! and in graffiti on the wall and edge. my finger slip and sink inside like stickwriting, came on the inside of my skin dive! sound! broke and hyped ellipse all curled up and flagged. wait after that and write it off to the side thopology of that come on get off dive! sound! get down let's get down let's get down. I'm extended contraband and longtime release pharmaceutical gift to the english department. range and sky and aftershift, white circuits double flicker, trip of the future chair. the white circuits deserve a job. communication is on the 101 and the profession calls for that reduction of signature and they know that, professors of citywalk and beinecke. through the see-through walls in the absence of even them voices like toy horns: thought you might be interested, G; worth a read, S.

when I first filled out the application to join the white boy circuit the face of all deletions is still always up under whatever saves the screen and became the mark of that one time doing what you never want to be doing ever again just this continual interrupt and taper these precisely broken measurements and displaced hypertones from all the uptowns you never been to but read about and have some cousins in. now everywhere you go you try'n to run over one'ese motherfuckers. the shit is sad.

the cadillac of the circuit empire is white, back end like a tank, because it's better for the heat. not strict script but improvise the melody but not here. cause and white hog, white pig, like that, not here. not here motherfucker not here goddamn it not here. muhfucker, mawfucka gott dammit, damn, not here. naw, naw, not here. just for a minute I took my hands off the beam. is the one thing I did right still burning at the heart of this application?

Latrell Sprewell is a shona bird, aggressive bottom lip and long finger and no kinda spruel. absolute SPREEwell, six foot six, one hundred and ninety-two pounds of man, full grown man. 22 talked about this kinda shit, and the one that sang on the Alabama chain gang Lomax didn't get to, chopping cotton in Tuscaloosa next to the field house, field nigger, work song. uncle P. J. Covey's boss gave a library, got served that night at Mussel Shoals by the ones who built the table, the bird cut his tether to reality.

you'd think a nigger would be satisfied with 32 million and act right. Alan Fein would think these agents would act in the best interest of the game and keep bird's foots on the ground, but he got hops. Len Elmore would think that these players would realize that the opportunity to play professional basketball is a privilege and not a right and adjust their attitudes accordingly. Harry Edwards would think that too. you'd think they would give something back. and this ain't to say that anybody can actually play anymore. my braid brush against the bottom of the board softer than me you'd think Charles Barkley would give something back to Alabama which gave so much to him, but he insists on talking and you know Charles talks a lot. each bird has an individual marking but there's nothing like them in the region surrounding the compound. my compound wraps around the freeway of rivers, bright blue stucco hills and edgy Salvadoran streets curving right into the plain of my television set in Los Angeles helicopter crossfire twenty-twenty 22 bird beautiful word daybreak

MICHAEL PALMER on Arkansas:

With probing urgency, Fred Moten engages a cultural lineage steeped in blues, R & B and impovisatory music in search of "that other speech," "the old-new language," the one that will help us discover who and how and what we are—and what "we" is. Arkansas is no one thing, no one place, rather a site of dynamic intersections. It is at once personal and public, a quick, razor-edged and openended conversation with multiple voicings. The work reminds us that no vital sense of community can be separated from its confustions and contentions and its ardent affirmations, just as no poetry of worth can settle for the easy assuagements of the given. It reminds us as well that in poetry the orial and the textural interweave to create a new language, a personal grammar ("grammar of the outside") illuminating the actual. Perhaps this is no more—and no less—than mimesis in its true, radical sense, the body at thought, now inside, now outside the changes. Whitman termed it "the projective," while helping us to found an American counter-tradition to which Moten and others are presently adding welcome new dimensions.

FRED MOTEN is from Las Vegas, Nevada and Kingsland, Arkansas. He currently lives in New York City and teaches in the Department of Performance Studies, Tisch School of the Arts, New York University.
